Getting it all together

The first day of a new school year most always is a nervous unorganized one. A new group of students enters the thrilling world of high school life in the form of the freshman class, and a whole new group of students takes the reign as the merciless senior class. As there are many changes being made, nobody knows exactly what to expect.

The 1981-82 school year at Rustburg High School defied this rule, however, as the year began in a very relaxed atmosphere. There were no additions to the RHS "family" since the eighth grade returned to the middle school, so the usual nervousness and first week-or-so jitters were non-existent. All of the smiles were familiar ones, and everyone easily settled down into a comfortable lifestyle.

Since everyone knew just about everyone else, friendships were strengthened where usually they are just being formed. Teachers and students worked well together from the start where usually they are just beginning to get the "feel" of one another. People were more outgoing and open where usually they are shy and apprehensive about becoming involved in new relationships.

As the year progressed, a number of other events seemed to naturally fit into place. The Girls' Varsity Basketball Team's skill and determination proved to the crowds who the #1 team actually was as they topped Liberty to capture the Region III crown and advance to the State semi-finals. We had the most successful Forensics team ever as the 1981 group won four firsts and four seconds in the district competition.

As the Rubik's cube craze swept the nation, hundreds of those irritating puzzles could be seen stashed away in lockers, on top of stacks of books, and in empty compartments of lunch trays. The Rubik's cube not only made its mark on the entire country, but also on the people of Rustburg High School.

Classes ran smoothly as relations between the students and the faculty simply kept improving. In general, having been in the new building for three years, everyone realized that it was time to move on to bigger and better things. All of the initial problems and surprises had finally been taken care of, and so it was time to look ahead into getting involved with different activities. This attitude continued throughout the entire year, as everyone made the best of yet another 180 days.

The entire student body, the faculty, and the administration knew what to expect on August 31, 1981, when the doors were opened for the first time of a brand new school year. This closeness and unity from the very beginning kept growing throughout the year to form a togetherness like never before seen at RHS. In short, 1982 at Rustburg High School was truly a time of getting it all together!

Student Life

Student life proved to be full of excitement during the 1981-82 school year. We had a special style that separated us from previous school years.

Not only was there a unique togetherness experienced during school hours, but the good times continued on after school, on game nights, and on those much-anticipated weekends.

In the afternoons, people were in the Commons Area listening to tapes, watching soaps on 5-inch TV screens, or just eating popcorn and talking.

On game nights, a special unity could be observed when the entire student body joined together to cheer the sports teams on to the many winning seasons that we had.

Weekends brought parties, dances, and movies! With inflation, the average number of dates was cut drastically. We did more things in groups and split costs so we could do more things together.

For a change, student life was one of togetherness, not of individuality. In short, student life in 1982 was a time of getting it all — together!!

Soaking up the fun

Summer vacation is a time of forgetting school, books, and homework; a time of having fun, soaking up the sun, and staying out late. When we returned to school in August, everyone had experiences to share from an exciting, action-packed, all-too-short summer of '81.

The summer vacation was enjoyed in various ways by RHS students. Some went to Kings Dominion, Busch Gardens, and even to Disney World. Of course, there was the ever popular way of beating the summer heat by spending a week or so at the beach.

While a lot of students loafed the summer away, some more adventurous ones entered the working world. River Ridge Mall and other area businesses were flooded with applicants from RHS students seeking part time jobs.

Still another group of students participated in school-related events. Lorri Farmer, Linda Mitchell, and Kim Taylor learned about our governmental system and met VA. gubernatorial candidates Chuck Robb and Marshall Coleman at Girls' State. Donnie Marr, Lincoln Wood, and Bill Scott had similar experiences at Boys' State.

Another Conference that was held this summer was the National Association Junior Achievers' Conference. Participants from RHS were Dawn Kidd and Bucky Dodson. Jack Moorman was selected to attend the Governor's School for the Gifted at George Mason University. Teresa Cunningham and Amy Roberts picked up tips for a better yearbook at the Max Ward-Delmar Workshop and Barry Payne attended a government workshop in Richmond.

The summer of '81 was a fun-filled one. There were family trips and some trips abroad to such places as Rome, London, and Madrid for Gina Bailey, Monica Carroll, and John Pendleton. There was also a little work involved for some RHS students. Whether it was a part time job, a conference, or a workshop, we all made the best of our summer vacations.

Boys' and Girls' State delegates Donnie Marr, Lincoln Wood, Bill Scott, Kim Taylor, Lorri Farmer, and Linda Mitchell spent a week at Lynchburg College and Longwood College learning about state government.

Bucky Dodson and Dawn Kidd take time out to reflect on their week at the University of Indiana where they attended the National Association Junior Achievers' Conference held this summer.

Celebrating with style

Homecoming '81 was an experience that the students and faculty of RHS will not soon forget. The festival started with an exciting carnival after school; along with the news that the scheduled game for that night would be postponed until the following night because of rain. All day long people were wondering how this could be, because the Homecoming Dance was to be held that same night. Panic ran rampantly through the rooms and corridors of RHS. "What? No dance?" some asked. Others immediately cursed the decision saying "I'd rather go to a dance than to a football game", but Mr. Hugh Pendleton and company had no intention of cancelling the dance.

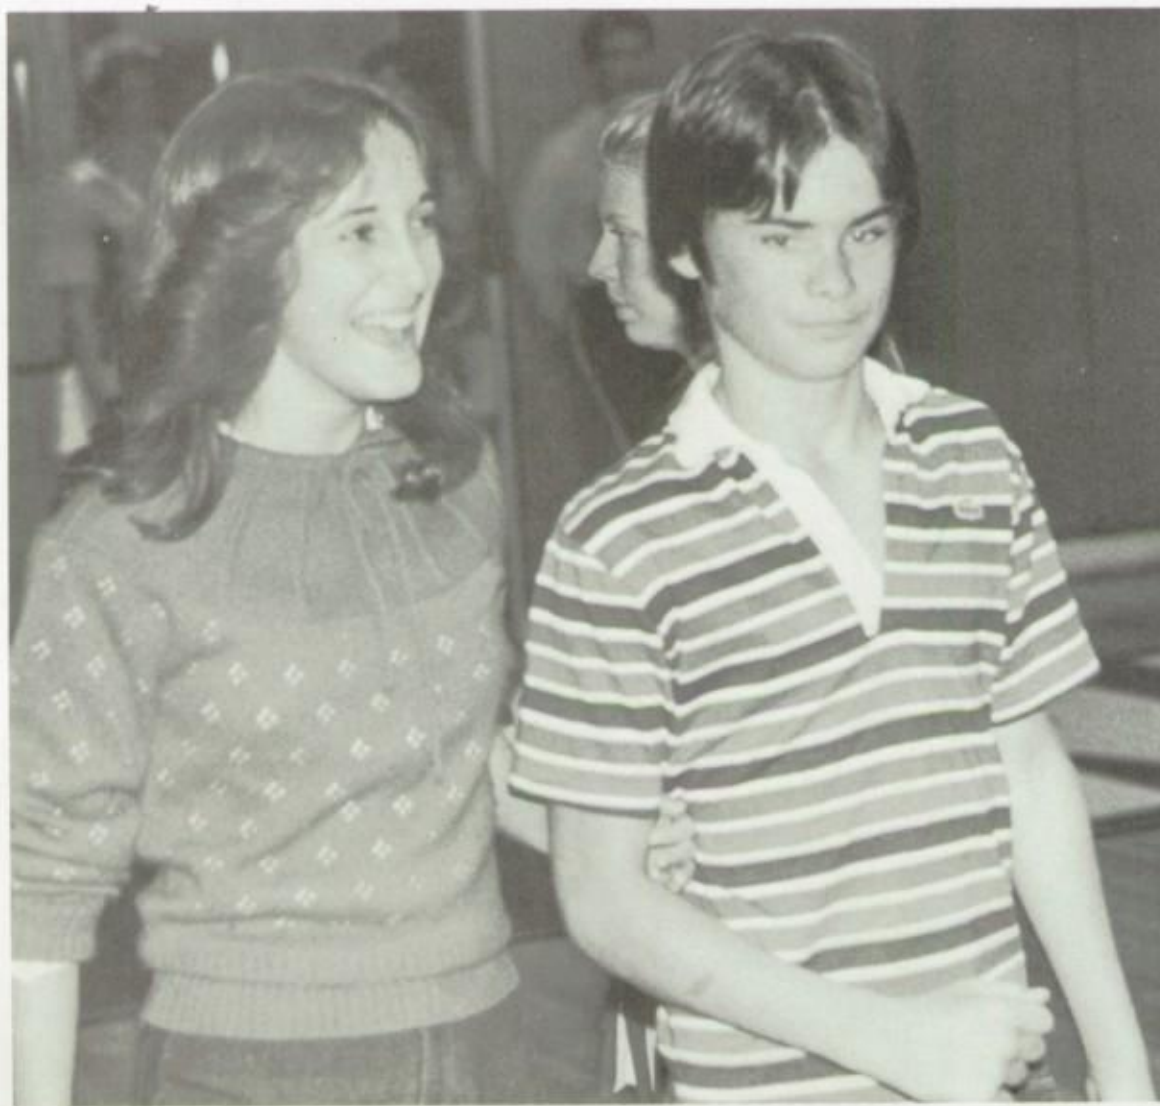

"But Mr. Pendleton, how can that be? Are we going to have the dance next weekend or something?", cried the student body. "No," quoted Mr. Pendleton over the afternoon announcements, "We will have the dance the same night as the football game, and the game will begin one hour earlier than usual to allow for this."

This meant a football game with the Homecoming Court procession should start at 7 p.m. and, according to "Mr. P's" calculations, RHS should be ready to boogie at 9 o'clock.

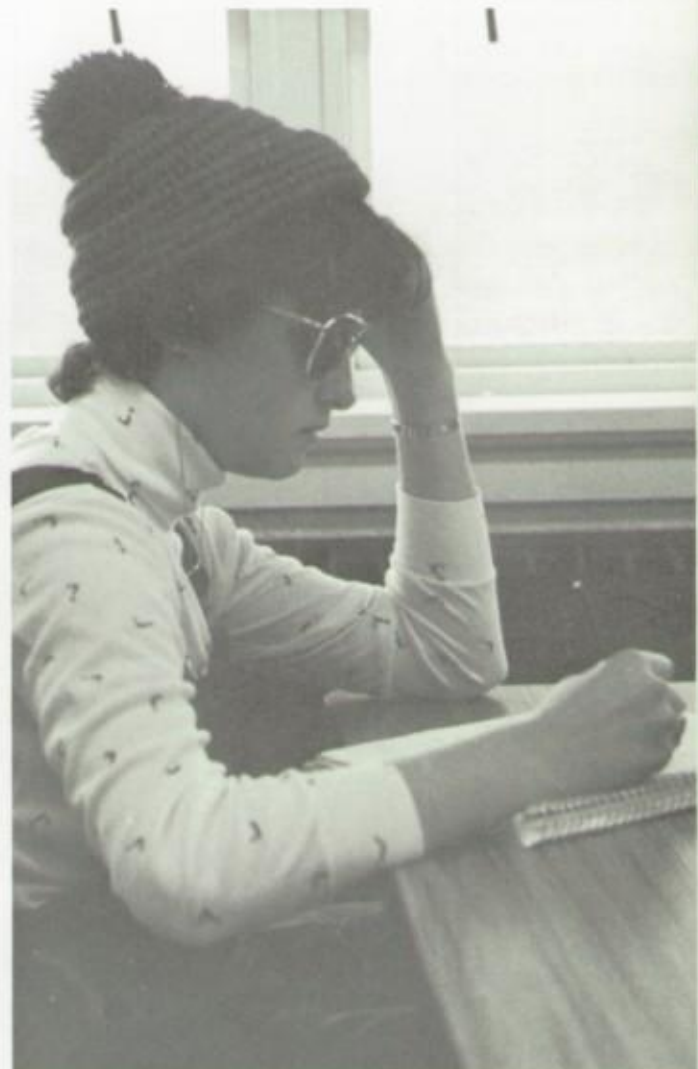

"What?" cried the student body. "He must be crazy! There's no way that the game will be over by 9:00, and even if it is the dance has to be over by 12:00 a.m. and that's not long enough!"

The halls buzzed once again with controversial remarks. Some believed the plan to be poorly conceived, arguing that the dance would be ruined because of the game. Some students took it in stride, however, and knew that the tradition of a successful RHS Homecoming would not be broken.

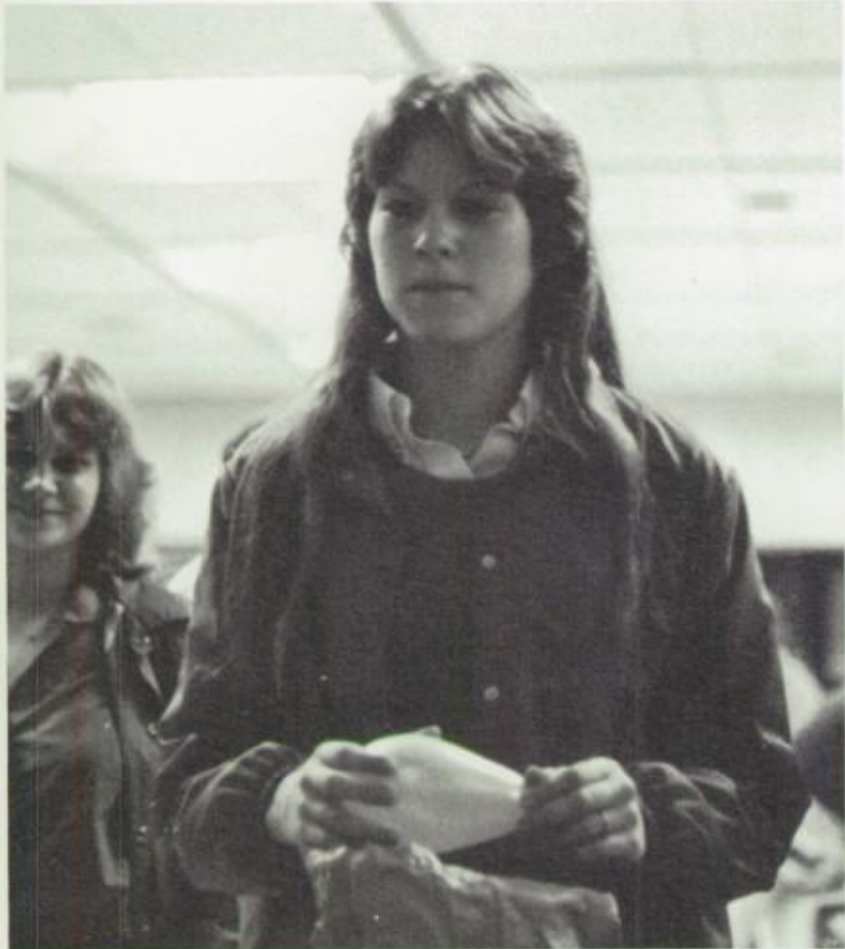

During the Homecoming Pep Rally, Freshman Bianca Evans and escort Adam Coleman are recognized for being on the Homecoming Court.

With a new hand sign, the seniors "pump up" their spirit to win the spirit stick during the Homecoming pep rally.

Snow skiing is definitely on the mind of senior Liz Miller as she dresses for her favorite sport on Athletic Day. Spirit Week included Sloppy Day, Mix-Match Day, Fifties Day, Athletic Day, and Color Day. Each day allowed students to show their spirit by dressing with the theme of the day.

Preparations for the Homecoming Carnival are made by Teresa Buchanan and Linda Riley as they finish blowing up balloons for the Sophomore Balloon Shaving Booth.

The Homecoming Carnival provided something for everyone, even a place to relax as Chip Staples, Crystal Brown, Susan Hall, and Teresa Hash find out.

Mud puddles were a common sight on Homecoming day; the rain caused the game to be postponed to Saturday night.

In order to get the Commons Area ready in time for the Homecoming dance, Lorri and Billy Farmer listen attentively for directions on hanging the decorations.

Celebrating with style (con't.)

The night of Homecoming '81 was damp and cold, but even so, by 7:00 the stands were filled to capacity with the excited Rustburg fans ready for the game to commence.

The football team rushed onto the field ready to play ball, expecting to have a hard game against the Nelson County Governors. By the end of the first half though, the score was Rustburg 7, Nelson 0.

The half-time activities began as the 1981 Homecoming Court paraded onto the field through a tunnel of flags. Amidst cheers and applause from the fans, Michelle Mason and Edgar Anderson were crowned Queen and King.

After the recessional of the court and band, the 2nd half got under way, and the mighty RHS squad ran away with it to shut Nelson out 19-0.

The game over and the King and Queen announced, the student body of RHS rushed to prepare themselves to party the night away.

Much to everyone's surprise, the game hadn't carried over too far into the dance and by 9:45 the students of RHS were getting down to the dynamite sounds of D. J. Bobby Wade.

The entire evening was a tremendous success, and all complaints about the time schedule stopped at the door. If anyone had been listening, he may have heard Mr. Pendleton utter a quiet, "I told you so!"

Cindy Forrest's T-shirt said what was on everyone else's mind, "Think-Snow!"

The first snowfall of the year did more than introduce winter to RHS. It raised the hopes of students wishing to go home.

The heavy snowfall doesn't slow down Lisa and Amy Roberts as they trudge to school.

Surprise is shown on the face of Gary Martin as his sleigh riding seems to be getting out of hand.

Enough is enough

What is light, white,
Falls soft in the night,
Is grown-up remorse
And childrens' delight?

The answer to this riddle is, of course, snow, a phenomenon of nature with which students are well acquainted. Snow is the thing that all students hope for through the winter months to bring them a break from school. They usually wish for "tons" of snow. Those who did so this winter got their wish, plus some unpleasant side-effects.

The first snowfall would have made the late Bing Crosby happy, as it did for everyone else. Christmas Day brought snow and hopes that accumulation would carry over until after vacation.

Much to the dismay of students, school re-opened as scheduled on January 4th. Making the situation worse was the realization that first semester exams were to begin in two weeks. Once again entered our hero: Snow!

Over a foot of snow and ice were dumped on the area, postponing exams until the end of January. Many students become so frustrated at having to wait for exams that more snow was actually unwelcome.

The worst setback brought on by the massive winter storms was the fact that graduation was set back one week from what was originally planned. A lot of students made good use of the time off, but after this major setback — more agreed: ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

Days of cold temperatures and little heat push students of second-lunch to dress as warmly as possible.

The snowfall doesn't seem to bother Mark Rolfes as he awaits the arrival of a friend.

Home away from home

Tension mounts as the end of sixth period draws near. Books are slammed shut, and pencils are put away as the final bell of the day rings. The students of RHS scurry through the halls rushing to their lockers and then to whatever they do after school.

For some, after school means hurrying to beat the buses in order to get to work on time. For others, it means long hours of practice for sports teams. Forensics or Debate teams, rehearsing for a play, or just shooting the breeze with friends.

In the Commons Area, there may be cheerleaders practicing cheers while, depending upon the season, football players padding-up for practice or basketball players bouncing the round ball around in the gym.

So, for many students, school doesn't end at 2:45, it just begins. These are the students that make school more a way of life than just something they do from 8:30 to 2:45. They are the backbone of RHS and represent our school in the public eye. We are proud of our extra-curricular participants for they are what makes Rustburg home away from home.

At an after-school dress-rehearsal, Cyndi Watkins, Donnie Marr, and Troy Coleman concentrate intently on making the senior play, "The Glass Menagerie", a huge success.

St. Nick got his snow!

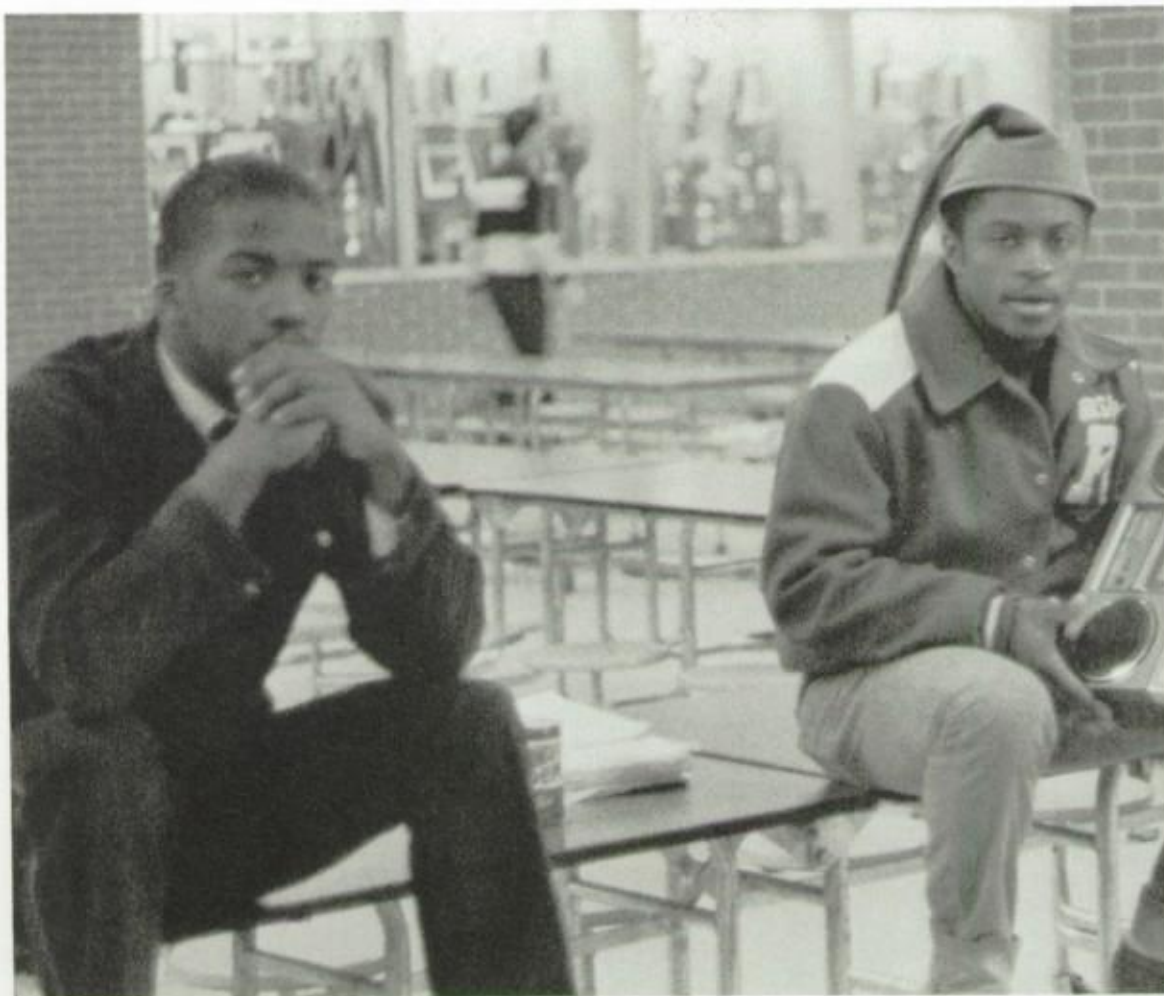

Everyone asks the famous question, "Is there really a Santa Claus?" at one time or another in his life. Not many people will flatly deny the existence of Santa Claus; perhaps in the back of their minds they have an image of warmth, cheer, and goodwill that becomes their own Santa Claus and inspires them each year at Christmas time.

Santa is commonly thought of as a fat, round character who slides stealthily down chimneys bringing material gifts. Perhaps a more realistic description of Santa would be a spirit that creeps into our hearts around Christmas bringing, not toys and candy, but happiness and goodwill to be shared by all.

Jolly ole' St. Nick surely didn't forget RHS when he handed out this year's supply of Christmas mirth. For a few weeks before and after our holiest of holidays, the students didn't just mosey to class as usual. They walked with a little extra pep, and for some unusual reason, always seemed to have smiles on their faces.

The SCA decorated a huge Christmas tree in the Commons Area with tinsel and lights and a star on top. The Foreign Language Department decorated their doors with colored foil, and students rushed about in childlike anticipation of Christmas morning. Many gifts were exchanged, and all through the building was that indescribable feeling of joy and exuberance that comes not from receiving, but from giving. School dismissed on Dec. 18th at 1:00, but students lingered in the halls and Commons long after the bell to exchange last minute gifts and holiday wishes. Each student took home a little bit of school spirit to make his holiday complete. Shopping lists were completed, and cards were mailed. As for that long awaited Christmas morning, it finally came, and for the first time in over ten years, it was white!

Living for the weekend

Student life could be terribly hard at times, and it seemed like there just weren't enough hours in the day. For five days a week, students battled the ever-increasing amount of work consisting of academics and sports.

The weekend was a pleasant gleam on the horizon for most. It was something to look forward to on those rainy days and Mondays when things just didn't seem to be going right.

Some of the activities in which students indulged on those fast-paced Saturdays and lazy Sundays were going to the movies, bowling, playing tennis, skating, eating out, having parties, going to dances, going shopping, or just riding around. These, among many other activities, were included in the weekend fun.

Some students, instead of working fast and furiously during the week, preferred to save things for the weekend, so they ended up doing homework and maybe watching a few TV shows like Fantasy Island or The Love Boat.

With the ever-rising cost of driving, other students had weekend jobs with local business establishments such as The Big Tee in Rustburg, Moore's County Store on Route 460, and Village Market in Concord. These part-time jobs helped students pay for absolute necessities like gas for the car, tickets to the movies, and bills at the frequently-visited fast food shops in town.

Another rather expensive hobby that really caught on was skiing. With the development of nearby ski resorts like Wintergreen and Massanutten, many students plunged every week or two to strap on their ski poles and buckle their boots to go careening down the slopes at neckbreaking speeds.

Few could afford to spend $30 per week on skiing, so most toned their expenses down for the weeks in between and limited their activities to going out to get pizza after basketball and football games. Pizza Hut, Pizza Inn, and Sal's Italian Restaurant were the most popular places.

Another activity that seemed to lure a great number of students into spending money was playing electronic games at places like Silver Odyssey and Galaxy II. Games like Pac Man, Asteroids, and Missile Command grabbed students' attention as well as their wallets.

In the high pressured lives of students, there was always a need for a periodical change of pace. No matter what students decided to do, the weekends were fondly anticipated by everyone.

The old 'n the new

As the times changed, inevitably so did the styles and fashions that attracted students. Fashions, entertainment, and electronics were just some of the areas subjected to the fickle teenage mind, and they were some of the main areas of trend development.

There was a drastic change in the department of students' attire. For the past few years, schools had been infested with animals claiming space on shirts, slacks, and socks. Some students would not be caught dead without their trusty Izod or Fox logos.

During 1982, however, the clothing trend moved a bit away from the preppy styles. Students began to feel comfortable again wearing blue jeans, sweatshirts, and less colorful socks (without the animals). This didn't mean that students abandoned their preppy standbys, but they did begin to incorporate some diversity in their wardrobes.

Colleges made a killing by marketing fashions bearing the schools' names. T-shirts and sweatshirts with the logos of more popular colleges and universities set the trend. Ohio State, N.C. State, UNC, UVA, Notre Dame, and Clemson were favorites with the students. The day after UVA topped UNC in basketball, orange and navy blue flooded the halls as students showed their pride in the Virginia Cavaliers.

Along with stylish clothing came the proper accessories — namely jewelry. The add-a-bead necklace was seem more than ever, as multi-colored beads were added to the traditional solid gold ones.

As far as entertainment went, students began developing more down-to-earth attitudes. They began to prefer movies with substance, such as "On Golden Pond" and "Cannery Row" over the wave of horror movies, like "Halloween II" and "Venom."

Home entertainment became more and more popular with the sophistication of home video games. The Atari and Intellivision companies capitalized on the most popular video games, allowing people to play them on their own TV sets. Homes were invaded by "Asteroids," and "Space Invaders," and "Pac Man," saving lots of quarters in the process. In fact, the craze inspired a song entitled "Pac Man Fever," which was released in early February.

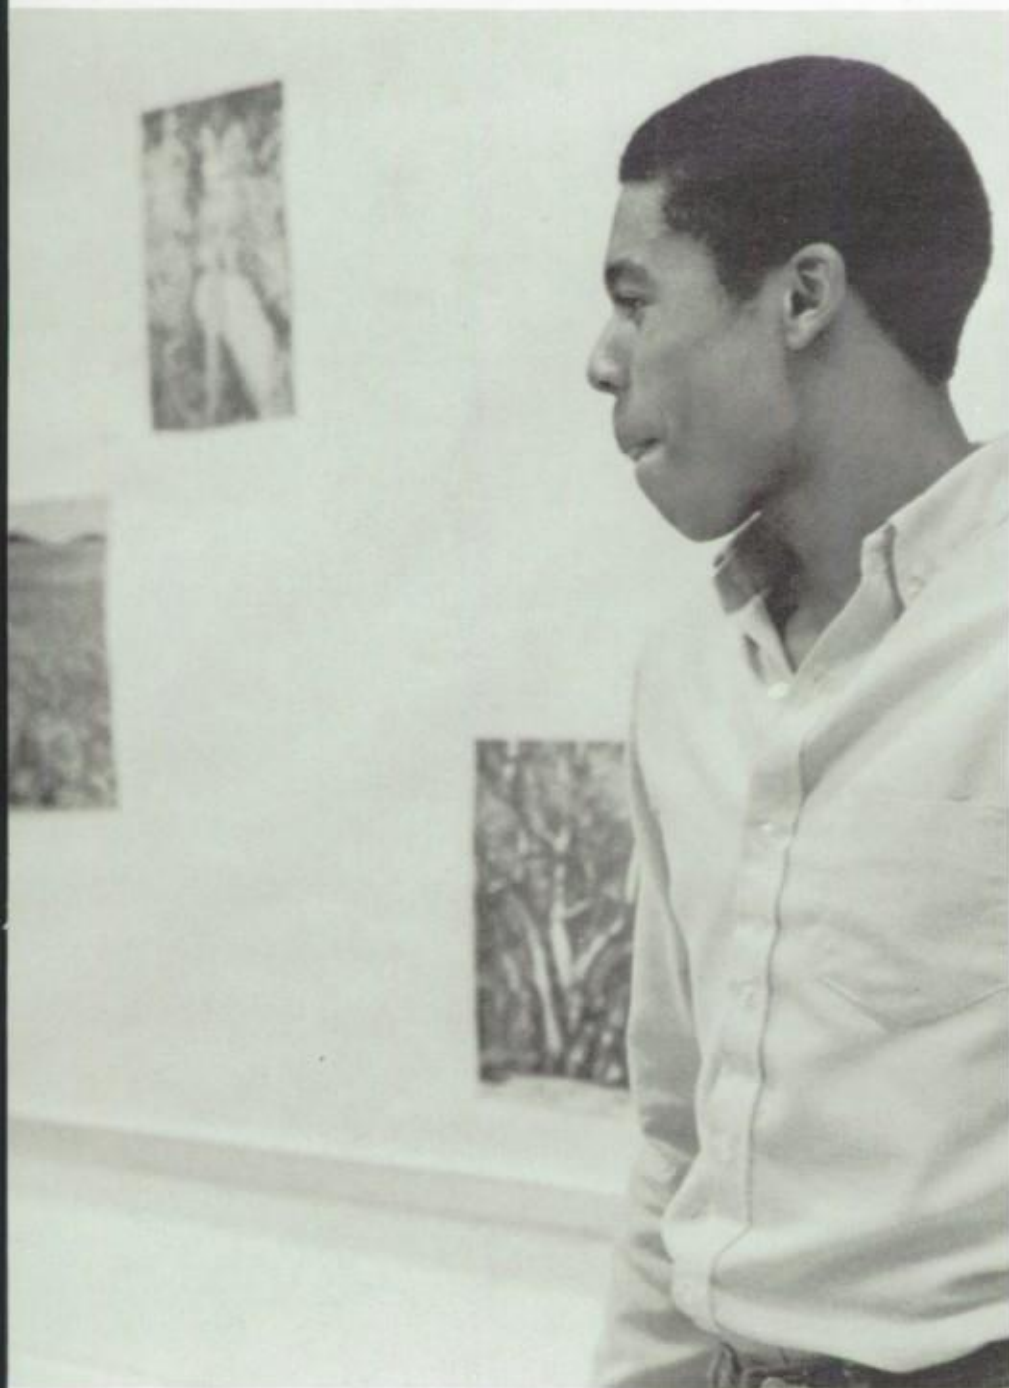

Students invariably gave in to the world's newest and most favorite of headaches: the Rubik's Cube. Hours were spent puzzling over the four-cubic-inch enigma, and RHS even produced a few Electronics was the latest of areas to take control of students' minds and money. Watches and calculators which played music were a big hit, as well as miniature stereo sets. It was quite common to see hand-held cassette players linked into tiny headphones.

There were some fads that were particular to Rustburg High School. The most popular was the holding of the fist with the index and little fingers pointed upward. This sign symbolized our Red Devil's horns and our ever-popular phrase, "Pump it up." This practice and all of the other trends and fads comprised a huge part of RHS students' lives!

Disaster, Reaganomics, and Romance

From a world-wide aspect, 1981 and 1982 were very eventful. There were conflicts: separations and assassination attempts, and break through: space exploration and new economic plans. There was royal romance, and a newly-elected 40th president.

The year was one of interior unrest in Poland. The national labor force Solidarity uprose to challenge government refusals to improve working conditions. Under Soviet influence, martial law was imposed on the nation, temporarily silencing Solidarity leader Lech Walensa.

Assassins' shots were heard around the world. President Reagan and Pope John Paul II narrowly escaped death, while a militant force gunned down Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

An attempt to scare the U.S. Government was alledgedly made by the government of Libya. As General Ghadeffi's assassination squad was discovered in the U.S., another terrorist group kidnapped Brigadier General James Dozier in Italy. After six weeks in captivity, Dozier was rescued by a brilliant task force.

The winter of '81 was considerably harsh in comparison with past winters. Record low temperatures brought devastating ice and snow storms, one of which was the cause of a fatal crash of the 737 Florida Flight 90 from Washington D.C.

Many events of the year advanced mankind and brought hope to the world. The Space Shuttle Columbia became the first vessel to carry man into space more than once. After considerable delays, the craft finally launched on Nov. 12, 1981, and several experiments were undertaken as the Shuttle orbited the earth thirty six times.

Along with the new president came Reaganomics. President Reagan planned to cut spending in the areas of welfare and education, where he met Congressional opposition. A determined diplomat, Reagan saw most of his legislative ideas passed.

A year marred with violence was brightened by the Royal English Wedding. Prince Charles made Lady Diana a princess in the most celebrated wedding of the century. Television coverage of the spectacular marriage began about three o'clock in the morning, but millions of Americans refused to miss the event.

The world is always a busy place, and the years of 1981 and 1982 were ones of the most remarkably eventful ever. They brought a mixture of catastrophe and success!

Rustburg represented in World Series!

1981 was a very spectacular year for America in many ways. The space shuttle Columbia was a tremendous success, Ronald Reagan began his battle against what ails the American economy, and the Yankees didn't win the World Series.

Here in Rustburg we have had an extraordinary event of our own. Rustburg's Dixie Youth Baseball League sent an All Star team to Louisiana to play in the Pre-Majors World Series. Team members were G.R. Campbell, Marty Campbell, Duval Cardwell, Adam Coleman, Keith Cyrus, Mark Elliott, Bill Farmer, Emmett Fielder, Greg Gunter, Troy Helm, Dwight Jones, Jon Martin, John Rosser, Randy St. John, and Mike Thompson.

Accompanying the team were Bobby St. John, Manager; Gordon Campbell, Coach; Tim Childress, Coach; and Bob Farmer, Trainer. These men put forth a lot of time and effort into helping the team. They all had to get time off from work, and they helped raise money by asking local businesses for contributions, which they added to the $1,150 the team received when they won the State Championship in Buckingham.

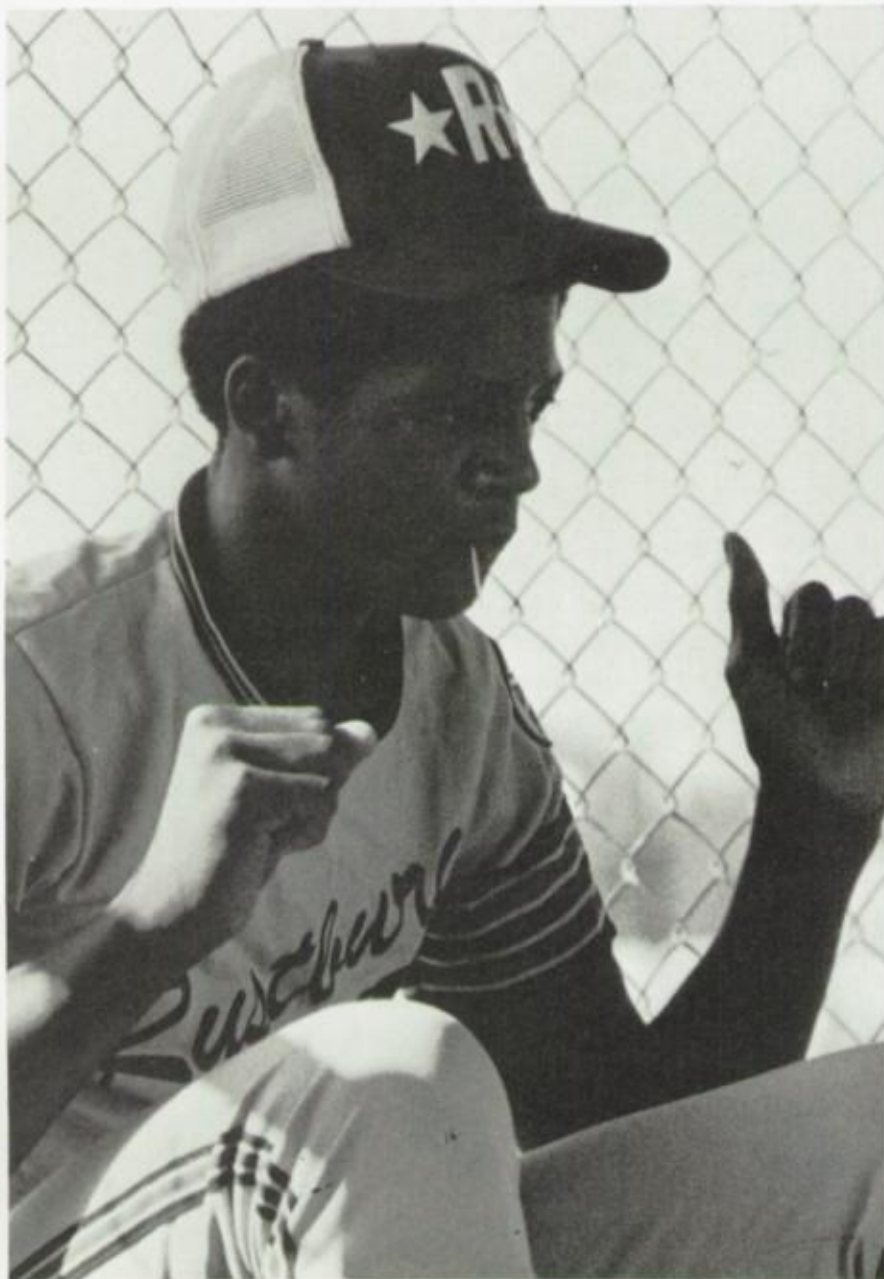

The team played well and knocked off Florida 6 to 5 in a record 10 innings, and North Carolina 3 to 2 in another close match up. They came in 5th place out of 11 teams, losing to Alabama and to Texas.

Randy St. John knocked in the winning run in the record breaking match up with Florida, while Troy Helm knocked in the game winning run in the contest with North Carolina.

The team consisted of sophomores and juniors from RHS and did its hometown proud on the state and national levels. This is the first time Rustburg has ever won the state championship and qualified for national competition.

The team spent 46 hours on the road and a total of 8 days away from home. Rustburg, and indeed the entire state of Virginia, is tremendously proud of this group of young men. They brought a bit of national glory and recognition home to their own little corner of America, Rustburg, Virginia.

Contentment

The community of Rustburg is one where almost everyone knows everyone else. Although it is small, those who live here are content with its size. The small-scaled area allows for a friendly atmosphere. The people are generous and always are willing to lend a helping hand.

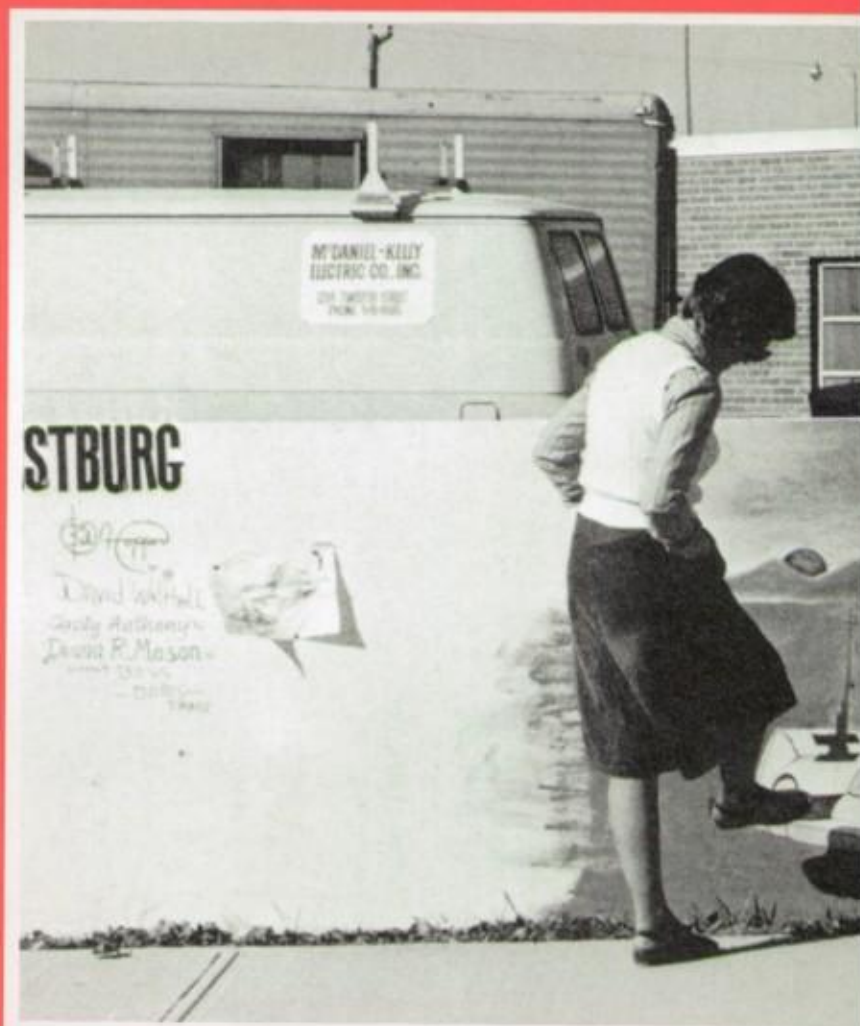

Even though Rustburg is not as commercialized as the town of Altavista or the Brookville-Timberlake area, it is the county seat. It accomodates the various official buildings of Campbell County, such as the Court House and the Division of Motor Vehicles. The county jail and Camp 9 Correctional Unit, as well as the Campbell County Public Library, are all found in Rustburg.

The town's size is growing slowly, as more people are moving out of the city. It has four schools, two stores, five gas stations, one full-service station, and a laundromat. Also, there are three restaurants, three churches, and a Ruritan Club. Most importantly, there are many neighborly people who enjoy Rustburg's quaint, though small, appearance.

Involvement benefits community

All too often, parents and other people outside the school think students become involved in nothing but school activities. Of course, sports and academics are extremely important, but for Rustburg students, the community plays a large role in daily life. Students thrive on events in the community, whether they are buying gas or providing services for area citizens and organizations.

Rustburg High School served as a site for several community functions. November third was election day, and students were obliged to work around the electoral process. The auditorium housed the Falling River district voting booth. Campaigners and voters alike gathered to the RHS facilities and the election.

The RHS DECA organization once again sponsored the Bloodmobile, placing it in B-105 and the guidance office. On December seventh, Red Cross workers drew blood from students and area citizens until late evening, collecting a total of 88 pints. This life-giving participation brought a sense of pride to the student body.

Students took part in many community-minded activities in Rustburg, but some events drew them to other areas as well. One such function was the Jerry Lewis Telethon. Students collected money through several fund-raising activities. Some even worked as receptors of phone-in pledges at River Ridge Mall.

It is important for students to receive an education balanced with knowledge in the community. Through the many civic activities based around the school, RHS students acquire such an educational balance.

Our spirit shines

What is school spirit? How does one define it? Is it screaming and yelling at games and pep rallies? Is it dressing up and clowning around with friends or just believing that your school is number one?

Spirit was all of these things and more. Pep rallies and games are but two of the many places students got together to "show their spirit." They really supported the teams, and even ad libbed a little when they got angry with the referees.

The craziness continued during Spirit Week. This was when students dressed according to the designated days of the week. Monday was the infamous Sloppy Day when students and faculty brought out their oldest and most ragged clothes and attempted to be the sloppiest of the sloppy.

Tuesday, Athletic Day, had students dressed as athletes in sweat suits. Wednesday was declared 50's Day, so T-shirts and bobby socks, along with greased hair and saddle oxfords, characterized the guys and gals.

Mix and Match was the theme for Thursday. A stunning array of colors with plaids on stripes and pokadots with checkered fabrics were absolutely blinding. Friday was Color Day, and most everyone came dressed in some form or another in red, black and white.

More people participated in the fun and craziness than was expected, showing that RHS is certainly no slouch when it comes to showing spirit. The energetic people together supplied an abundance of school spirit.

"Hands on" experience

Junior Achievement is a program which is designed to give interested students training and experience in corporate business. The "hands on" type program is set up and financed by local businesses because they believe in the advantage it can give potential employees over the average applicant.

The students set up their own company in groups of a dozen or more per company. There were about eighteen companies in the Lynchburg program plus a J.A. bank where the companies set up their own financial systems through which they paid for production expenses and salaries. 1981-82's Junior Achievers produced chimney cleaners, coat hangers, bookcases, and files.

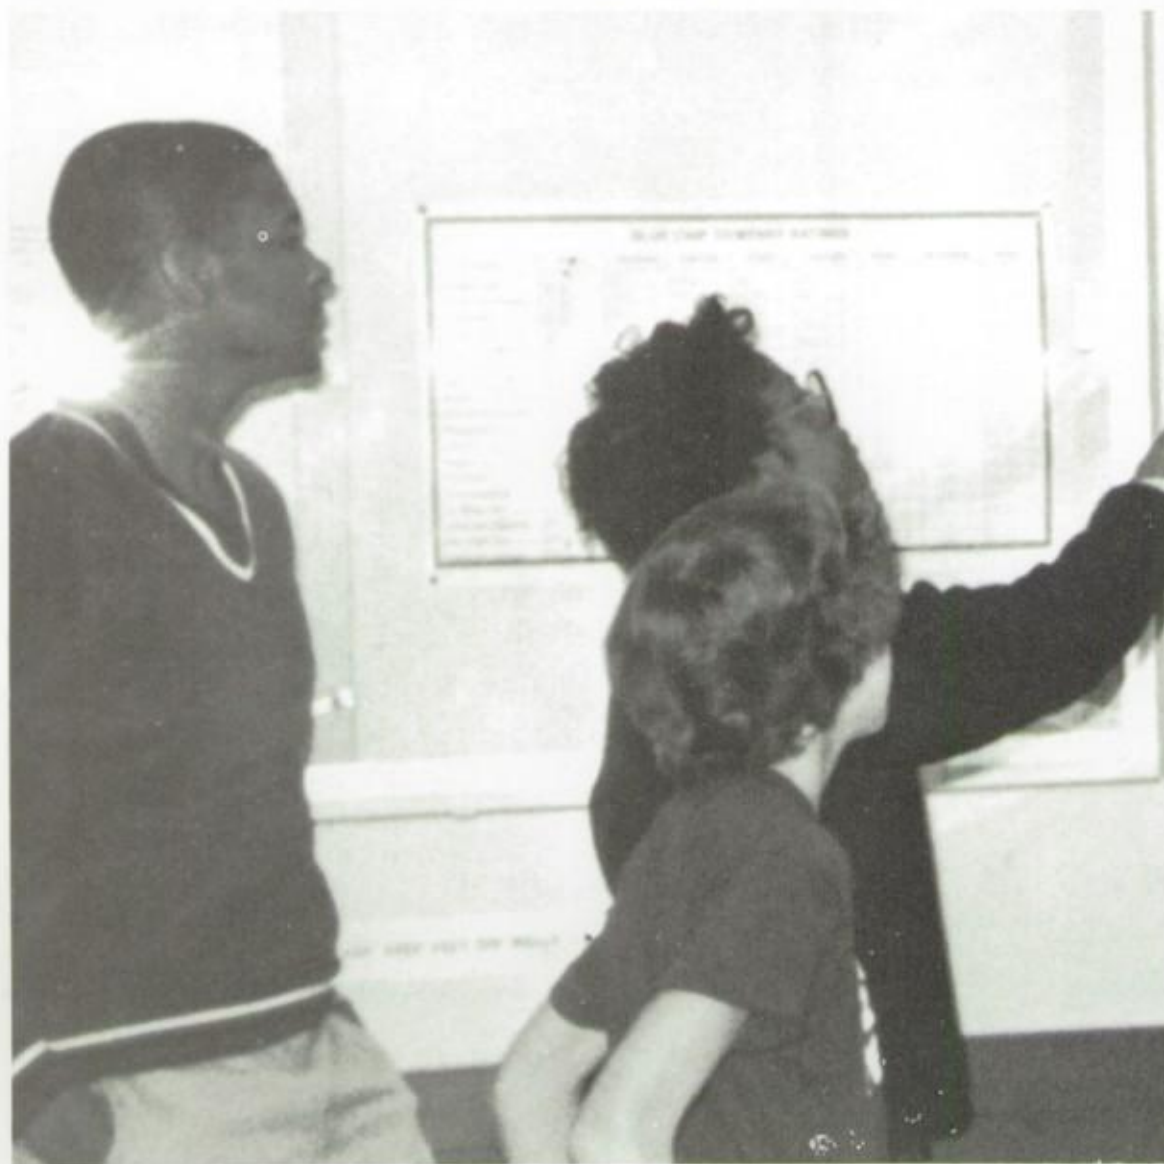

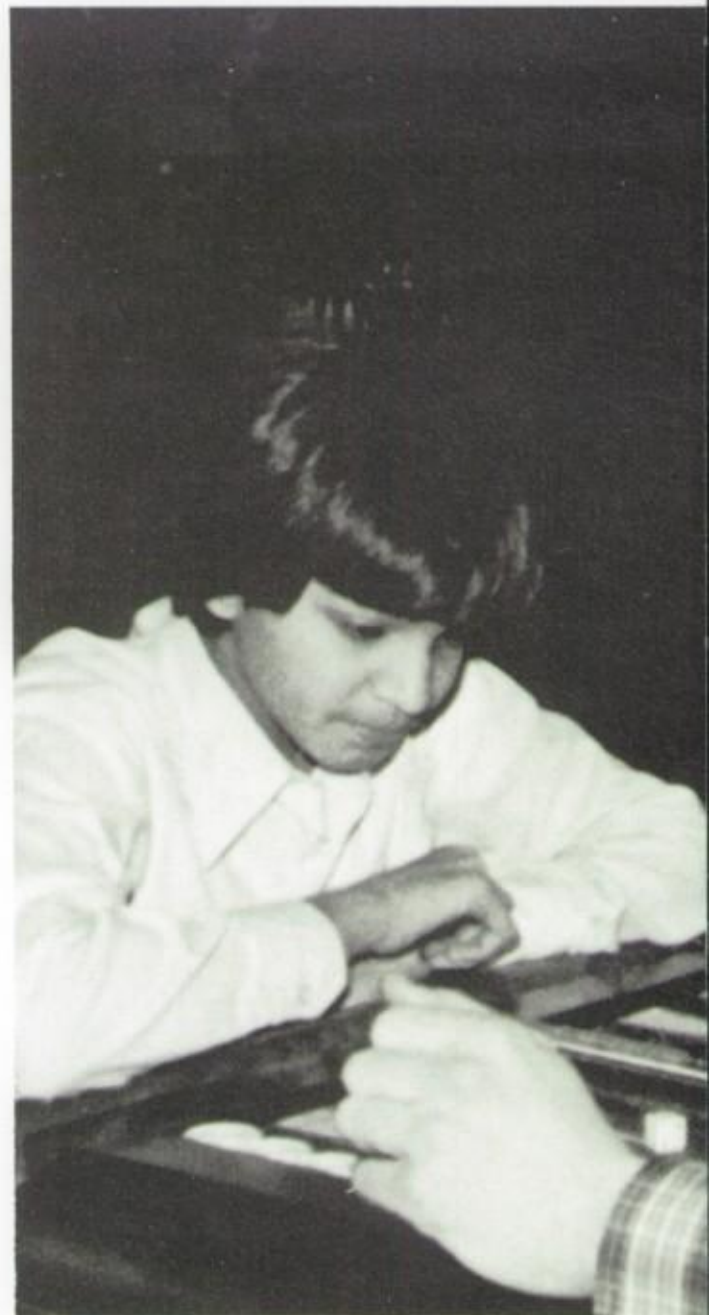

Many RHS students participated in the program, and two went on to conferences on the regional, state, and national levels. They were Bucky Dodson and Dawn Kidd. There were different competitions at these conferences, as Bucky was a competitor in the Young Businessman of the Year contest, while Dawn competed in public speaking.

Junior Achievement is a highly praised program of national scope. Businessmen and companies such as Babcock and Wilcox and General Electric believe so strongly in the program that they are willing to finance the entire operation and even supply instructors to work with the students who decide to join.

Scholarships are offered, and sometimes outstanding young business people can be offered a job straight out of high school.

When applying for a job at virtually any business, having been a member of Junior Achievement is a definite plus, and sometimes it can make the difference between getting or not getting a job.

Eric Scott, Mark Johnson, and Maria Loving take a break from their companies to look over the J.A. records.

Sports

Sports played a major role in the 1981-82 school year. The skill and determination of sports participants made athletics at Rustburg among the top in the Seminole District.

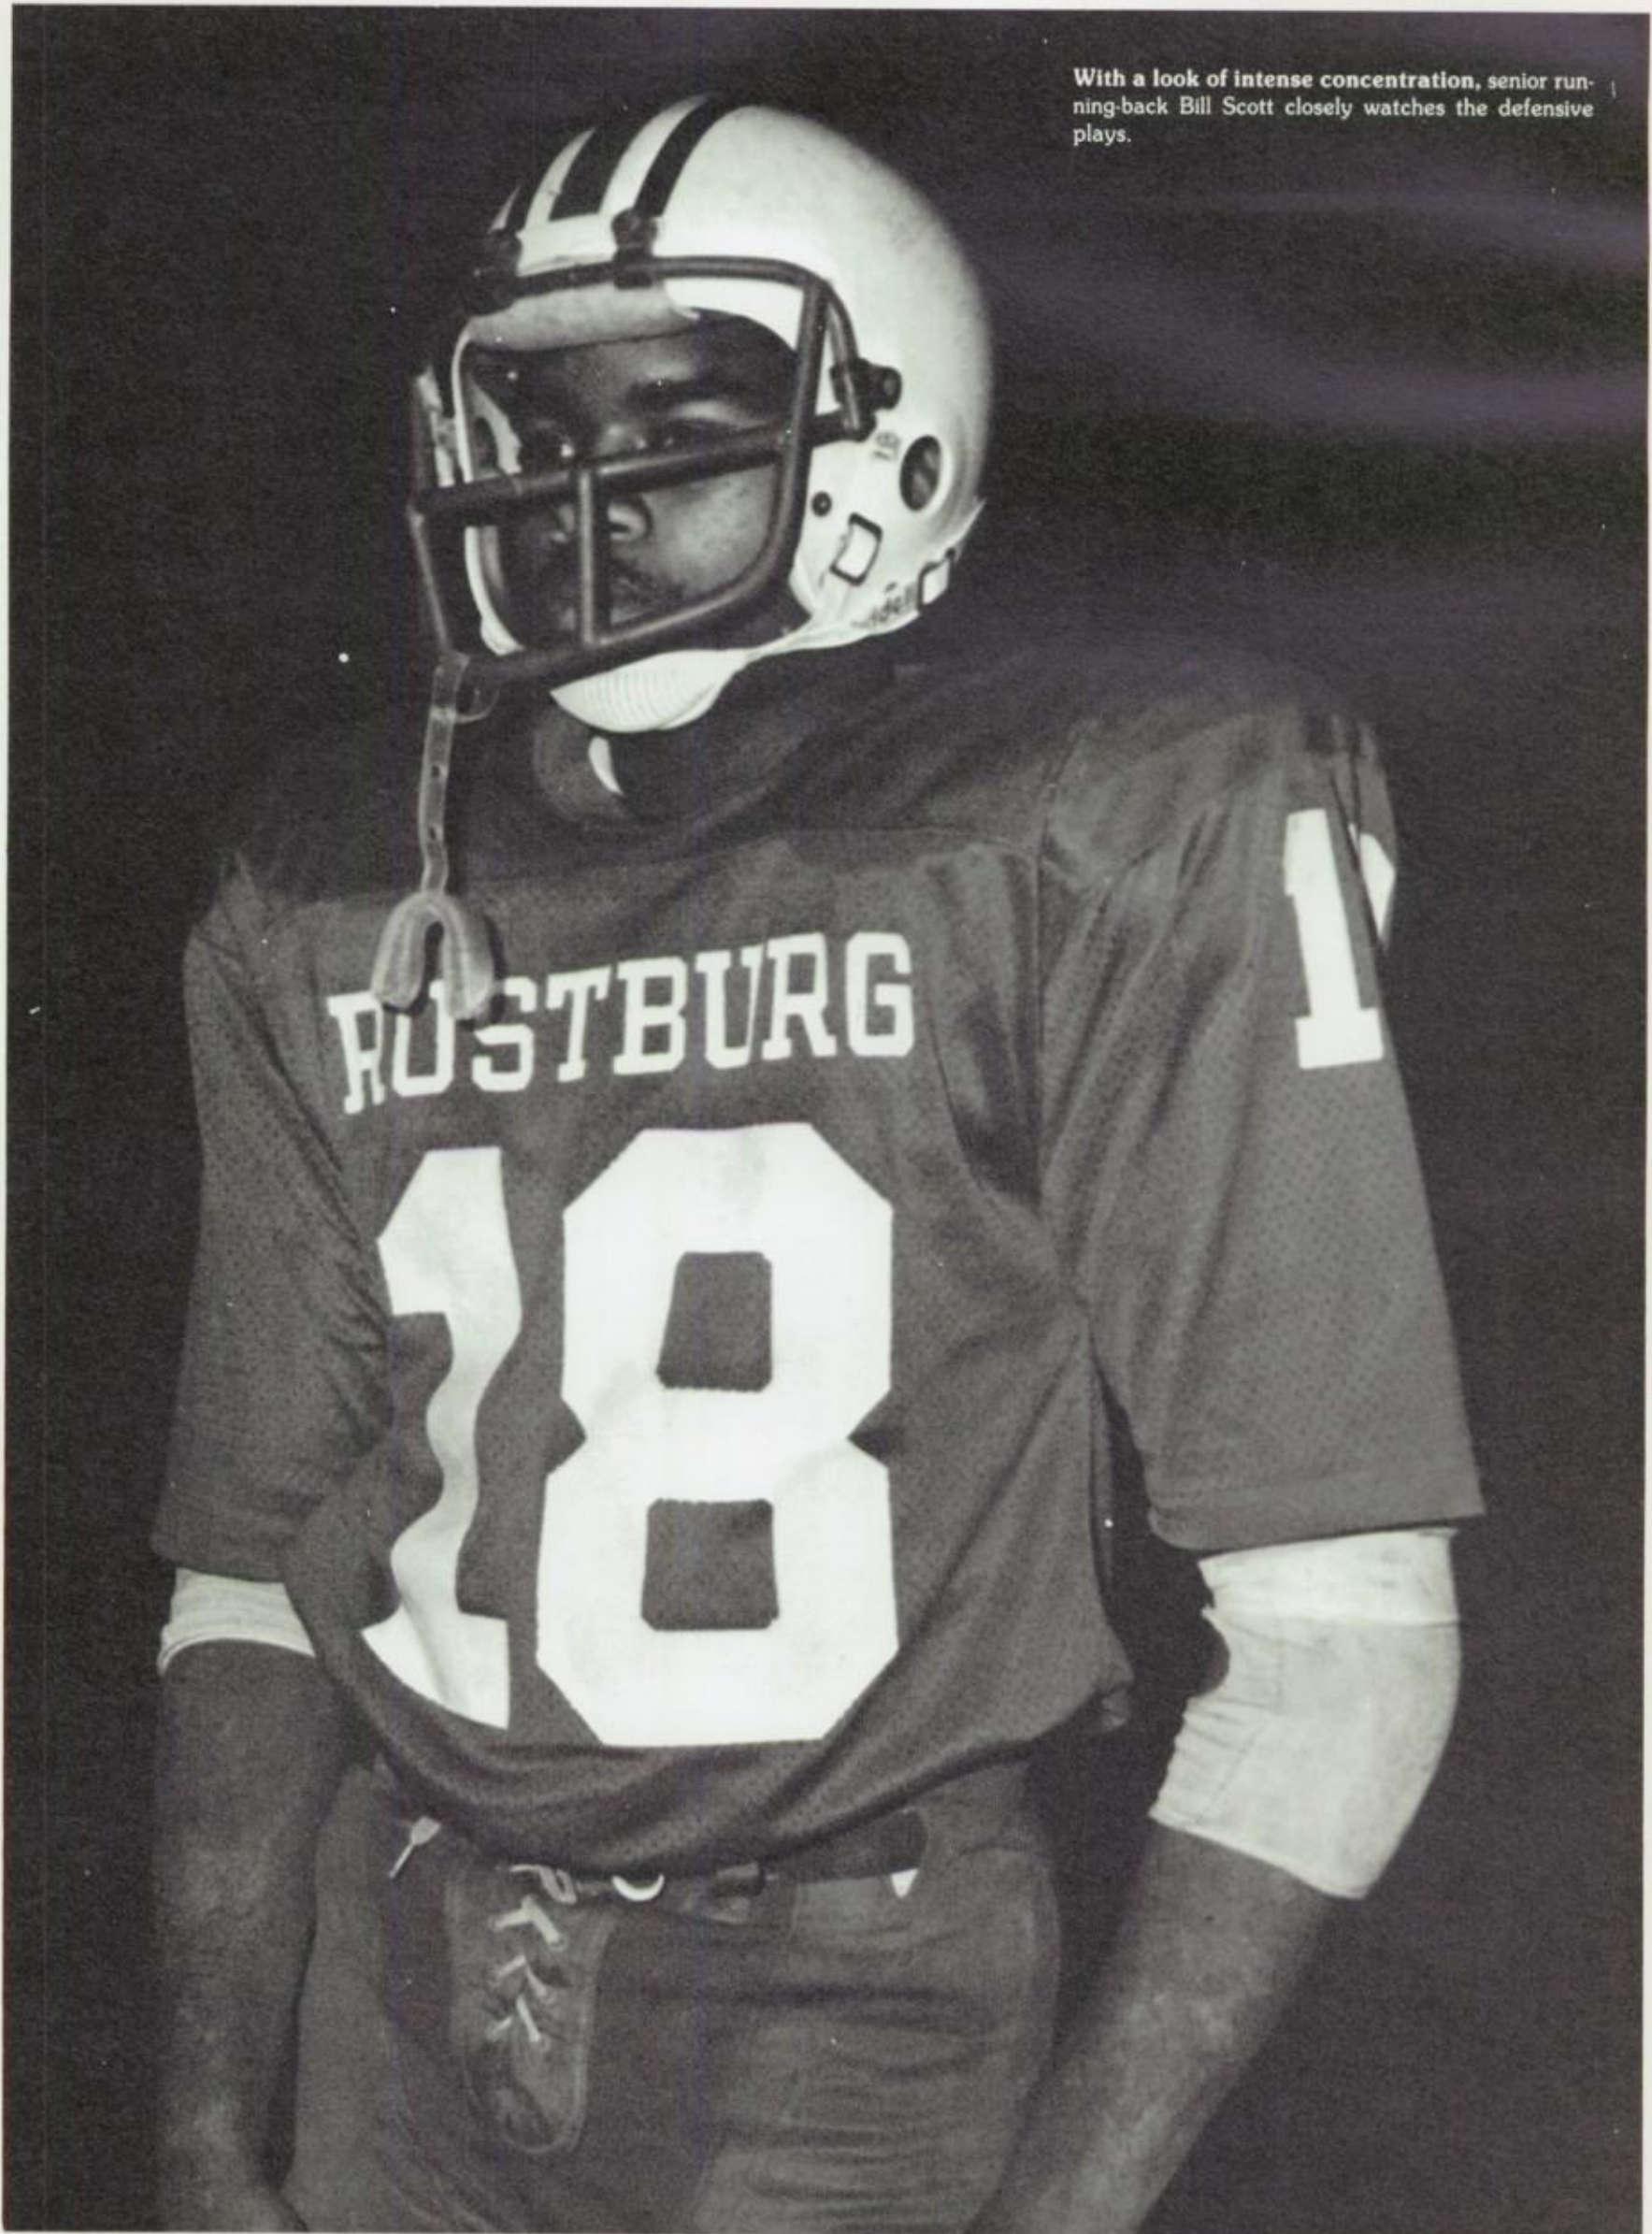

In September and October we bundled up for football games and cross country meets. Newcomers to the fall line-up were the girls' basketball teams.

The winter sports program began in December when faithful fans supported the boys' basketball teams. The wrestling and indoor track teams put in hours of practice to make their seasons the best possible. The volleyball team quickly adjusted to the seasonal changes and kept their tradition of a winning record.

In March, the baseball and softball teams began the spring season as they strove to the top. The golf team made its mark on the greens of the Cedar Hills Golf Course, while both tennis teams aced their way through their matches.

All three seasons made 1981-82 athletics something to be proud of and proved our outstanding athletes had gotten it all together!

With a look of intense concentration, senior running-back Bill Scott closely watches the defensive plays.

Diamonds in the rough

The 1981 baseball season got off to an excellent start with Rustburg beating Altavista and William Campbell to win the tournament at Altavista. The season then seemed to take a nose dive. The Devils went on a 3 game losing streak, losing to Appomattox, Jefferson Forest, and Liberty.

The team's strong character came through, however, and carried them on a 4 game winning streak, defeating Gretna, Brookville, Buckingham, and Altavista. After this they lost the next three games, to Gretna, Nelson, and Liberty. The Red Devils defeated William Campbell, but lost to Jefferson Forest and Appomattox to finish the season with 7 wins and 8 losses.

Mitch Stone and Kevin Markham turned in incredible batting averages of .510 and .500 respectively. Stone only struck out once all year and was the only Rustburg player to make the First Team All District.

The girls' softball team lost only 5 games all season. Appomattox dealt them 2 of their defeats in hotly contested battles. Gretna gave the Devilettes their only other losses in regular season play. The Devilettes played in the tournament at RHS and beat Appomattox in the semi-finals, but they lost to Gretna in the finals. They finished third in the district over all. Top players for Rustburg were Kathy Charlton, Marjorie Dyke, and Cindy Lewis. The starters consisted of these three along with Lisa Charlton, Amanda Jackson, Denise Glass, Kristi Claybrook, Donna Adkins, and Robin Thompson.

No home for the Devils

Uncertainty plagued the 1981 outdoor track season from the start. The Devils had just recently moved into a brand new school with brand new everything. Everything, that is, except new athletic fields, including a track!

Left without a home field, the teams were forced to meet all other schools away. This was a bit of a disadvantage, but the Red Devils were determined to make the most of the situation.

They trained hard and turned in respectable season records. The boys went 4 and 3 to finish fifth in the district, and the girls were third with a 3 and 1 record.

High scorers for the boys were Terry Bradley, Juan Kimble, Thomas Jefferson, David Moore, David Walthall, and Allen Tanner, while Sarah Jackson, Yvette Rosser, and Angie Jones were the female standouts.

Thomas Jefferson, who just walked out onto the track at the start of the season with very little conditioning, had an excellent spring. He placed high in the 880 yard run, the long jump, the high jump, and was on the mile relay team. "T.J." came very close to the school record in the 880 yard run with a time of 2 minutes and .3 seconds, but he was running an 800 meter race which is slightly shorter than the regular 880 yard race, and when his time was converted, he missed the record by .3 seconds. (The record is 2 minutes and .8 seconds.)

Sarah Jackson, who was tops in field events for the girls, also had a fine season. She participated in the long jump, the high jump, and was on the 880 yard and 440 yard relay teams. She also ran the 100 yard dash. Sarah holds the RHS high jump record with a jump of 5 feet.

The 1981 track season, which started on an uncertain note, finished with both teams in the upper half of their district. It just goes to show that hard work and determination pay off.

Follow the bouncing ball

It all began in the hard, cold, wintery weather of February. The members of the golf and tennis teams pulled out the clubs and the racquets to begin another season of hard practice and hard victories. Through the course of the spring they even took some hard knocks, but still finished with success.

The boys' tennis season was one of ups and downs; it was filled with near-misses and a few not-so-near misses. The team lost two matches (Altavista and Appomattox) on third set tie breakers, one of which was lost 9-7. Pretty close!

Other losses and the team's victories, on the other hand, were generally one-sided. The team dropped matches to Brookville, Liberty, Appomattox, and Altavista, but destroyed Gretna, William Campbell, and Jefferson Forest.

The golf team had what would definitely be called a "rebuilding season." Coach Glenn Reichard had hoped for a few more players to turn out for his team, and sophomores Arthur Constantine, Bart Drinkard, Billy Farmer, and Kevin Milton joined up to form the base of the team.

Returning players were Pat Riley and Lincoln Wood, also the team's standouts. As one of Rustburg's best golfers in recent years, Wood repeated his goal of qualifying for the Regional Tournament by shooting a second place score of 79 in the District Tournament. At the Regionals he finished second again with another score of 79. Lincoln was stopped at nothing less than the State Tournament, where he shot an 88 and an 85, earning him a spot in the "Top 25" classification.

The girls' tennis team finished its regular season successfully by reaching the District Tournament. Unlike golf, where all teams compete in the Seminole District Championship, only the top four tennis teams are invited. With the skill and consistency of the top six players, the girls entered the District Tournament at 3rd seed. Amy Roberts qualified for the singles division of the tournament and entered seeded fourth. Unfortunately, she was injured during her first round match with Brookville's Tonya Gryder and was unable to finish the tournament.

The teams were young and almost all underclassmen. The good news is that all three lost only one starter, so this year's teams will have experienced seniors. As Coach Bedford Luck (Boys' Tennis) remarked, "Seniors usually get it all together and play their best in their last year." The teams may have been inexperienced, but their determination and will to win were key factors in their success.

Carrying on the winning tradition

The work started at the beginning of August. The temperature was uncomfortable to be playing football, but a group of 35 guys bore the heat until midway through the month, when they started practicing in pads.

A strong group of 17 seniors led the team in exercises and taught the younger players the spirit and unity of Rustburg. The team proved their togetherness by assigning various nicknames to the players and soon-to-be-famous sayings that would characterize the mighty 1981 Devil team.

Some of these nicknames were "Tattoo", "Poochie", "T", "Boom Boom", "My Pal", "A.D.", "Hit Man", "Hatchet Man", "JV", "JR", "Hollywood", and "The Wizard." Some sayings were "Pump it up," and "Just as easy as bippedy-bop."

These young leaders unified the team for the season's opener against two time district champion Jefferson Forest and kept the team together throughout the season. Head Coach Ray Wade contended, "This is the best group of seniors I've ever had as far as leadership is concerned."

The offense showed a bit of weakness this year. The attack looked impressive against weak Jefferson Forest and Gretna teams, but it never worked to its full potential. The offensive line was led by Gerry Leffers, Tony Bagby, Edgar Anderson, and Tim Jennings. The Devils also had effective receivers in Thomas Jefferson, Lincoln Wood, and John Blankenship. The offensive backfield was talented also, with John Rosser at quarterback and Bill Scott and David Smith at the running back positions. The ability was there — they just had a hard time getting it together.

The team's strength lay in the defense. The line was led by David Peters and Randy St. John. David Moore, Orlando Burks, Tony Jones, and Tony Hirtz controlled the linebacker positions while Mitch Stone, G.R. Campbell, and Lincoln Wood did their jobs as safeties.

Three players made the All-Seminole District Squad. Bill Scott made it as a kick returner, as he put in a fine effort every time he touched the ball. Lincoln Wood led the district in receiving with 36 catches. He was also first team tight end. Orlando Burks was named one of the two best defensive ends in the district. He scored two defensive touchdowns on an interception (67 yards) and a fumble recovery (36 yards).

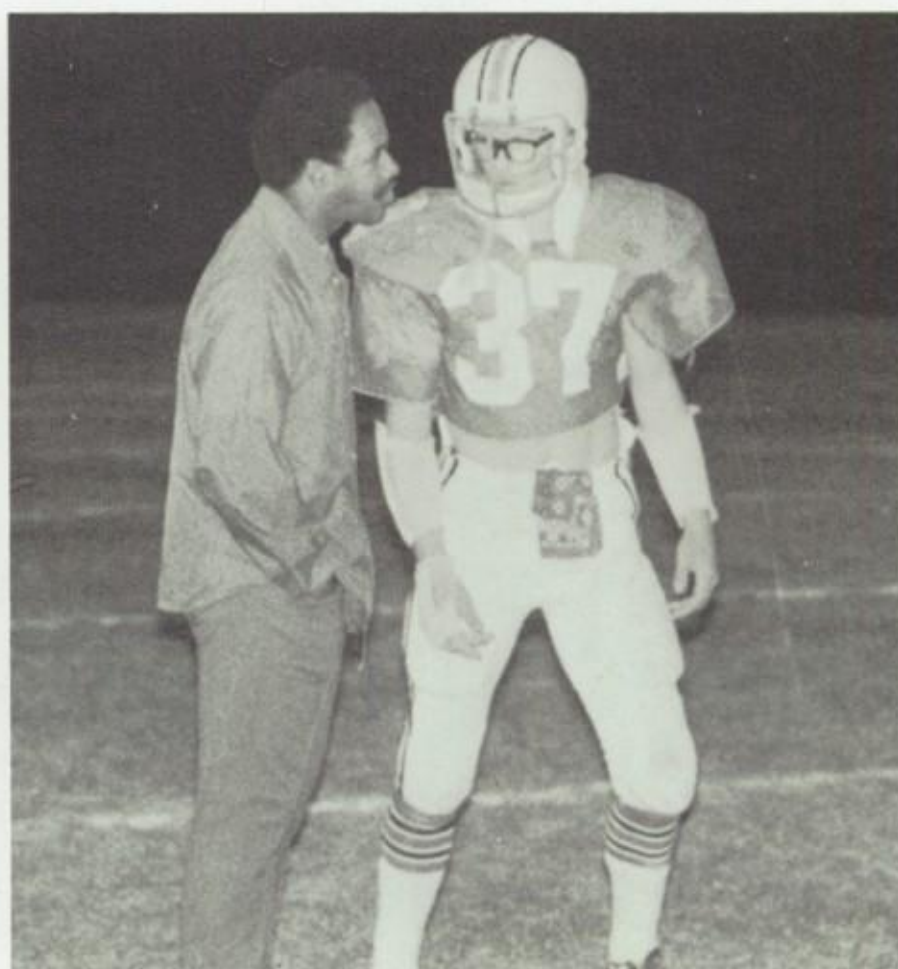

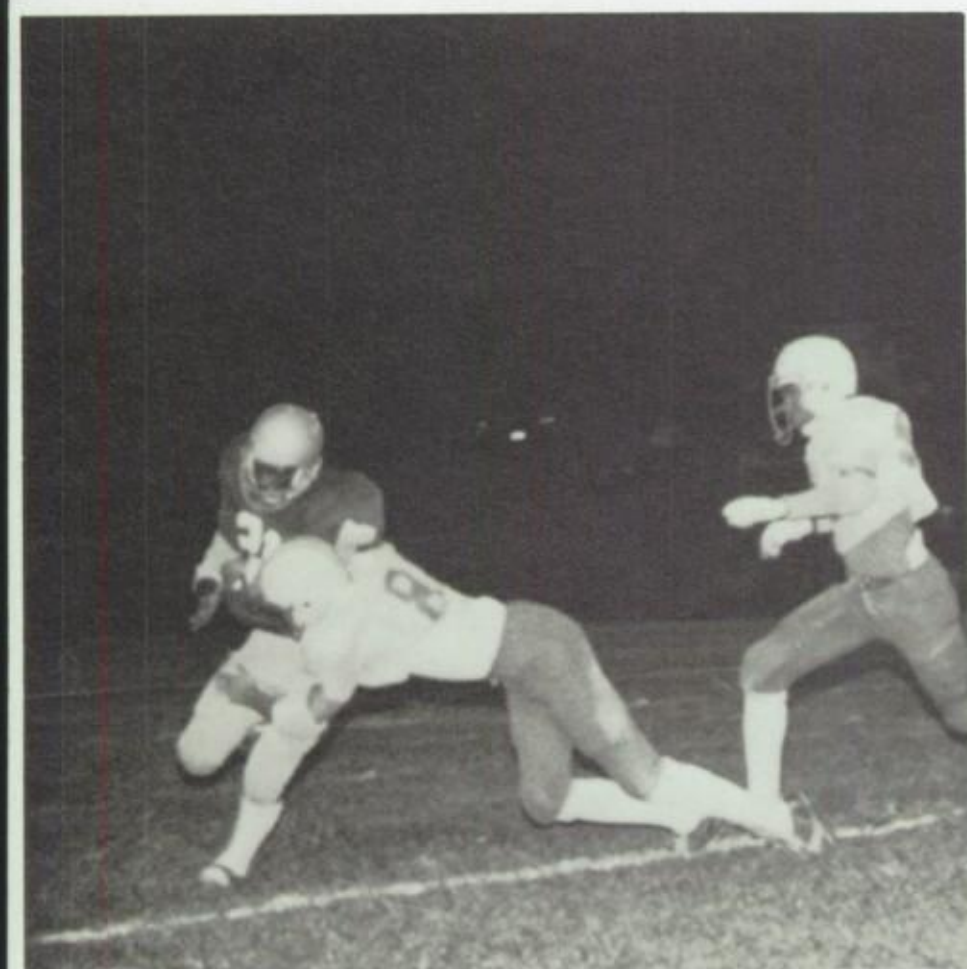

The team owed a lot to its coaches. They were Mr. Bill Herndon, offensive line; Mr. Mike Bennett, defensive line; Mr. Bedford Luck, defensive backs; and Head Coach Ray Wade. Without them, the Devils successful 7-3 record would not have been possible.

Fans watch anxiously as the devils perform the first kickoff of the season against Jefferson Forest.

Game by Game

Jefferson Forest, opening game at home. Bill Scott gains 233 yards rushing and Tony Hirtz gets 2 interceptions and a fumble recovery to help down the defending District Champs.

2

Liberty away. An impotent offense endangers the Devils. The defense recovers a fumble close to Liberty's goal, and Ken James blocks a punt to set up the winning touchdowns. Rustburg squeaks out a tough victory.

3

Appomattox at home. Defense has trouble stopping the Raiders running attack on its first two possessions, but then stiffens. Offense is ineffective until the last two minutes. Too little too late for the Devils.

4

Buckingham, away. Defense gives up a touchdown on Buckingham's first possession, but then tightens up. Offense scores a touchdown, but a penalty nullifies the effort. The sluggish Devils give up their second game in a row, and are now 2-2.

5

Gretna at home. Morale booster. Offense runs wild against a poor Hawk squad. Defense dominates, with a 99-yard interception return by Mitch Stone. Third string gives up some points, but it makes little difference.

6

William Campbell away. The defense keeps the score respectable against the eventual District champions. MVP Tony Jones gives another consistently good performance, but the Generals' football machine halts the Red Devils.

7

Dan River at home. Orlando Burks picks off a pass and returns 67 yards for a touchdown. John Rosser adds the winning margin with a 23 yard field goal as the Devils down the Wildcats for the second time in two meetings.

8

Nelson County — Homecoming. Pre-game activities get the team fired up. A hungry Red Devil defense forces several Governor turnovers that set up scores. A spirited Homecoming crowd cheers on the team to a special shutout.

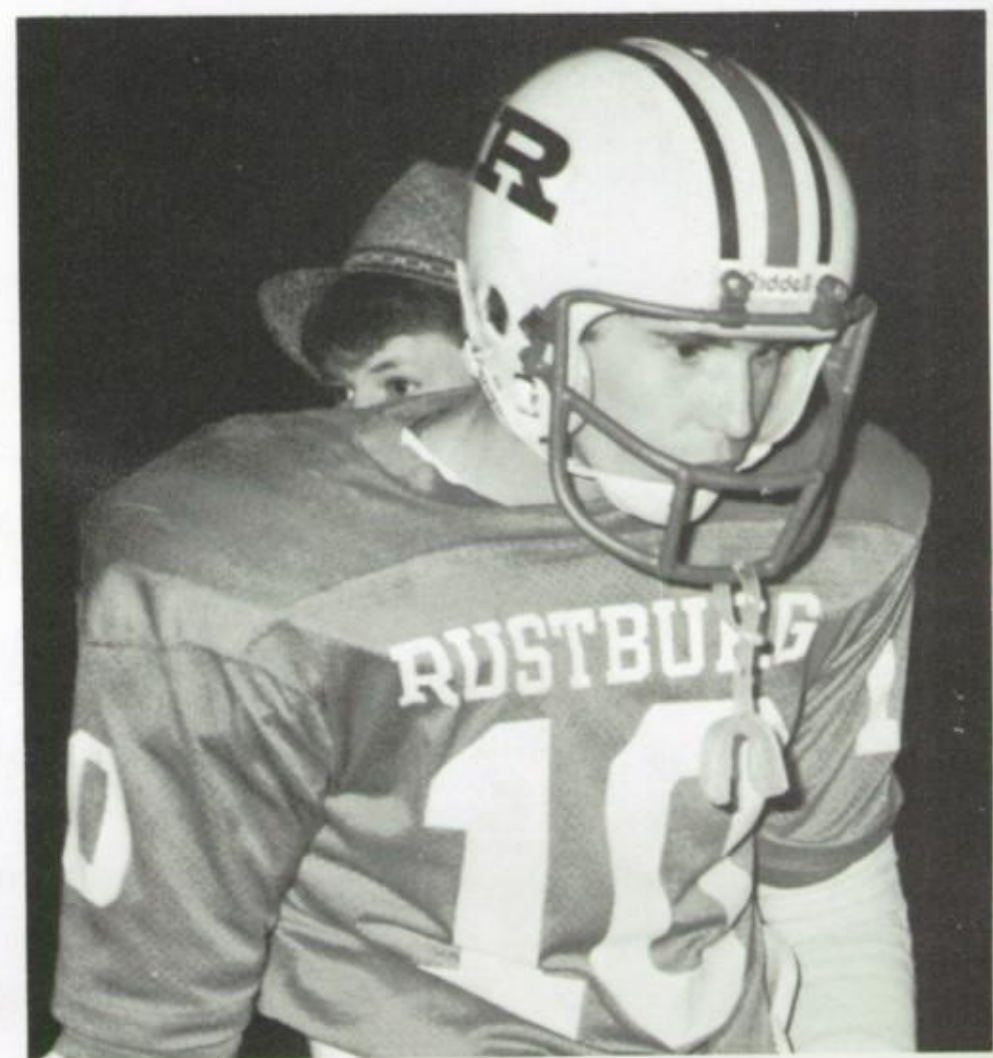

9

Altavista away. Fullback David Smith is injured early, but Bill Scott runs over Colonels. The defense holds tough, and a second-half brings a victory to the Devils, now 6-3.

10

Brookville at home — showdown. Defense scores all the points as Orlando Burks and Randy St. John run in a fumble and an interception, respectively. Devils whip Bees for the eighth straight year and knock them out of the playoffs.

The Rustburg defensive unit sets up to stop Nelson County Homecoming night.

Quarterback John Rosser plans the next series of plays while the defense scuffles for the ball.

The young and the restless

The 1981 JV football season was a very successful one which found the squad much improved.

The Baby Devils came on strong in their first match up, beating Liberty 20-0, but their momentum fell flat for the next three games. They lost to Appomattox, Buckingham, and Gretna in three consecutive games.

After these three losses, the team began to have visions of another losing season, but determined to prove themselves, they buckled down to try to make the best of what seemed to be a bad situation.

The weather was turning a bit colder now, and the mid-autumn breezes had a little bit of bite to them but, to the surprise of many, so did the Baby Devils. They romped over William Campbell 28-0 on a chilly Thursday evening at Rustburg's home field.

Their momentum finally building, they went on to whip the Nelson County JV's 18-6. The six points that Nelson scored came on a picked up fumble which the Governors knocked loose on their own 30 yard line.

By now the team's blood was boiling with the hopes of a winning season. They were to meet Altavista in Rustburg next, and they practiced hard in preparation. They had no trouble at all showing the Colonels who was boss, dealing them a crushing 28-6 blow. Again, the defense didn't allow the touchdown. It came in the 3rd quarter when Brian Anderson's punt was blocked on Rustburg's own 25 yard line, and picked up by an Altavista defender.

The final game was the always tough grudge match between Rustburg and Brookville, but the team came through with a 6-0 shutout, giving Coach Robert Miller reason for celebration.

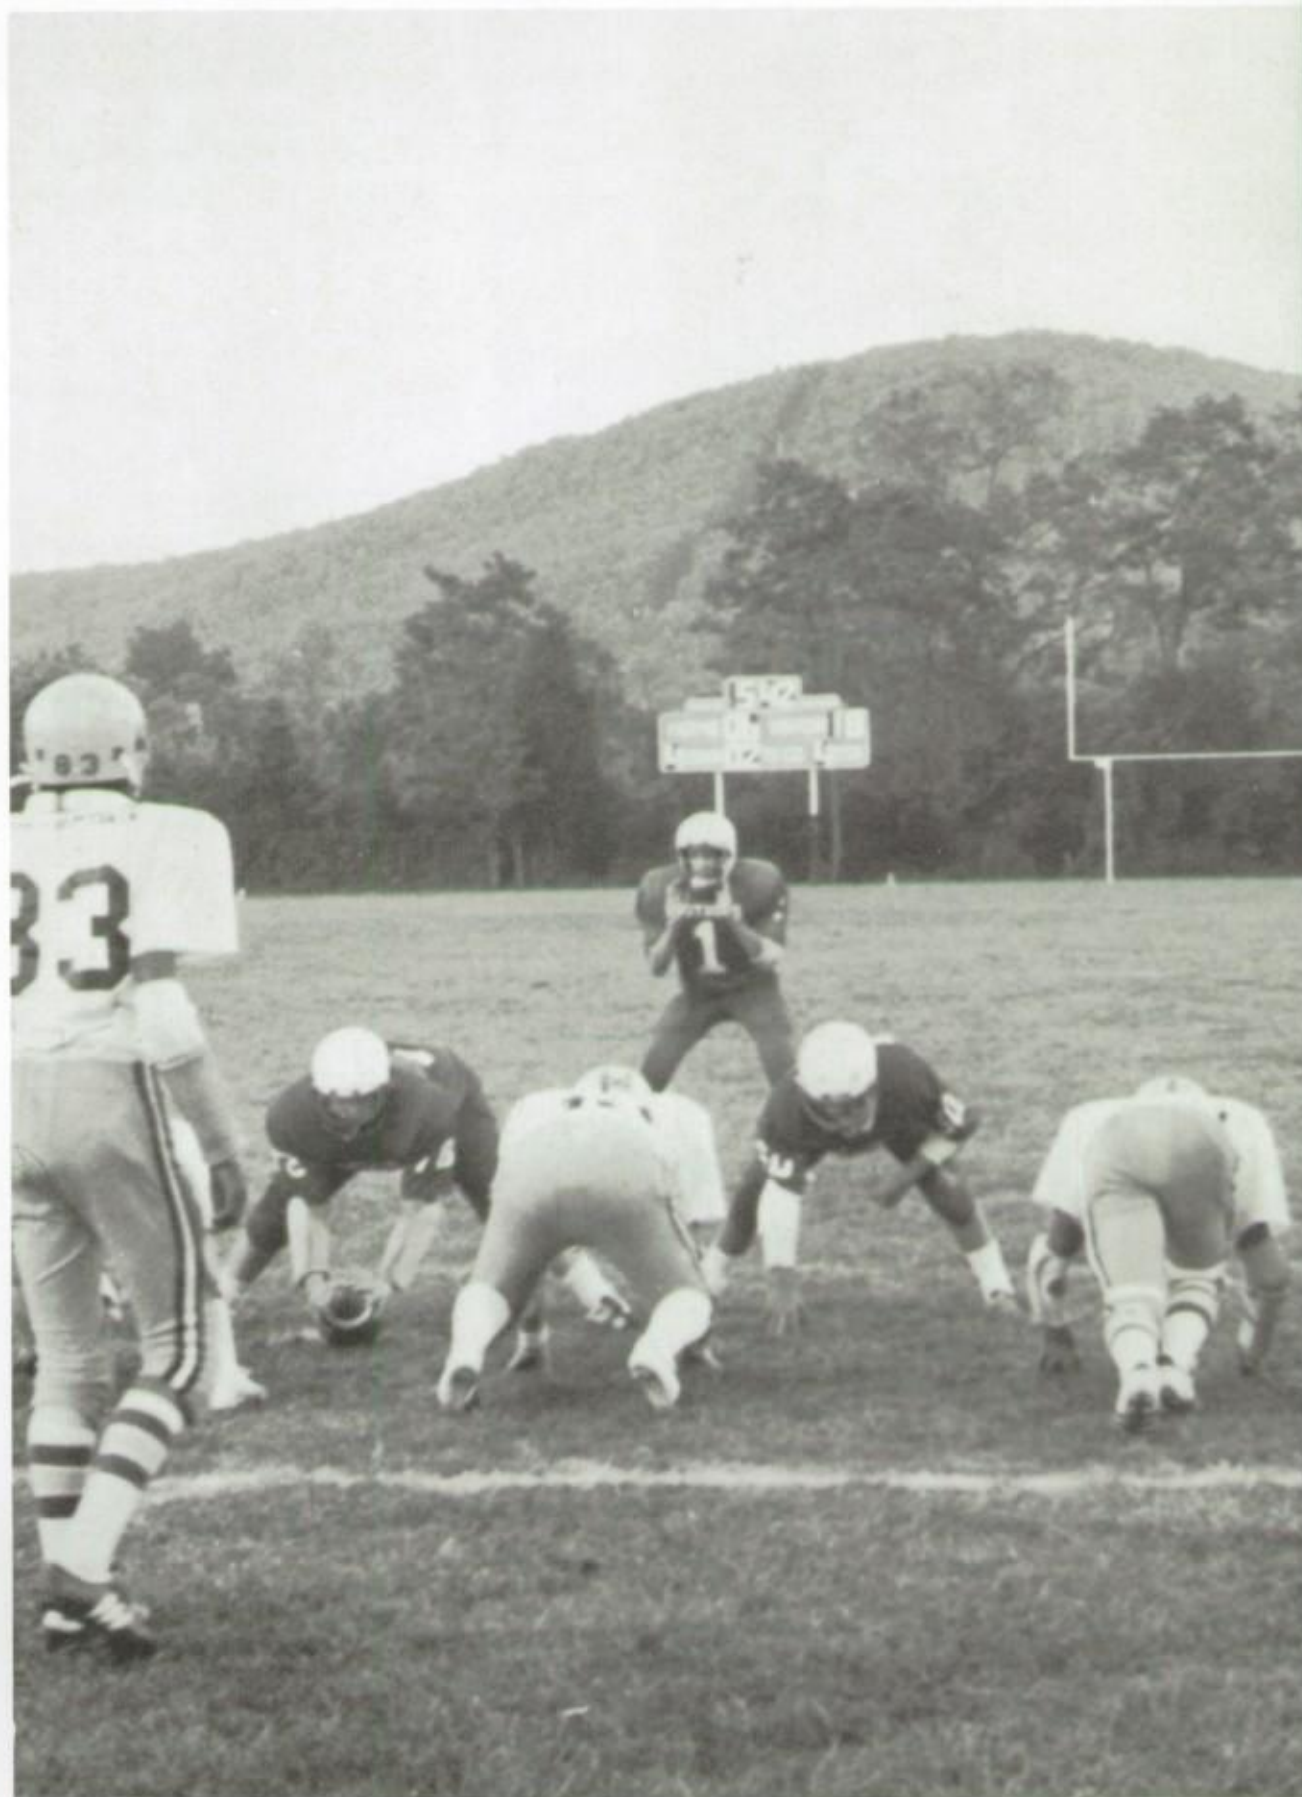

This JV Football Team showed much promise and should have an excellent future on the varsity squad. A few JV players, Brian Anderson, Ricky Davis, Mickey Paige, and Marshall Tweedy practiced quite a bit with the Varsity team and even suited up as reserves in some varsity games.

Brian Anderson and Mickey Paige were elected by their teammates as the MVPs, but they both agreed it was a team effort and team success.

Fatigue has definitely set in as Marshall Tweedy takes a break from the rigors of an afternoon J.V. game.

They keep that Devil Spirit alive

Football season was a very special time of the year. School had just begun, and the wheels of that "Big Red Machine", known as the Rustburg High School football team, had slowly squeaked into motion. Summer vacation was over, and students began to shake themselves out of that lazy summer pace and into the hustle and bustle of the high school scene.

Football games were comparable to the early morning cups of coffee that wake people up and get their blood circulating. The games woke up that "school spirit" which had tended to fade a little over the summer months.

Right out there in the middle of it all were those super-talented, super-spirited (not to mention super-foxy) cheerleaders. They "broke the ice" and got things moving in the brisk autumn air.

They got the fans ready to clap their hands and stomp their feet, or in the words of a popular chant "get down, get funky, get loose!"

These girls were not just good at what they did — they were great! In fact, the Varsity Football Cheerleaders, along with the Varsity Basketball Cheerleaders, attended summer camp at Randolph Macon Woman's College, and received top three honors out of dozens of squads (600 girls all together) from all over the east coast.

Their pyramids and chants, combined with energy, dedication, and good looks helped make football season what it should be: Exciting! For what is football without pretty girls in short skirts jumping up and down, screaming and yelling, and doing chants. It may still be labeled "football", but to players and fans alike, it just wouldn't be the same without the cheerleaders.

Yes, cheerleaders are as much a part of the football games as hotdogs, Coca-Cola, and bad referees. Another big part of the "sideline crew" is the infamous Rustburg Devil, our beloved mascot. Donna Adkins was the 1981 Trident toting, babble rousing, bundle of energy. Every Friday before a game she was in her satin "hot pants" and black cape, doing her best to help everyone "get psyched" during school and at the games. Many thanks to Donna, she was one heck of a devil, and to all of the football cheerleaders and their sponsors, Miss Debra Guthrie and Mrs. Cynthia Camp.

"Teamwork" is the word, as the whole varsity football cheerleading squad condenses into one beautiful pyramid. The Devils, like Cindy Dodge came out on top over Dan River.

Boys' basketball cheerleaders Michelle Mason, Regina Tweedy, and Lisa Hall perform during a time out at a J.V. game.

We've got what it takes

Basketball cheerleading had taken on a new meaning in the past two years prior to the 1981-82 season. With the welcome addition of stuntmen to the Varsity squad, spectators came expecting exciting partner stunts and formations on the floor, along with heart-stopping pyramids at the end of which a brave cheerleader fell backwards off the top of the pyramid into the arms of two trustworthy stuntmen. This incredible maneuver never failed to bring forth a rush of ooohs and aaahs from the audience.

The 1981-82 Varsity squad started the season off with a different sponsor which made progress slow in the beginning. Getting used to the new system brought about some controversy among squad members, but hard practicing helped to smooth out rough edges.

Among the repertoire of stunts were moves with names such as: "Shoot the moon", "Back hiplift," "the death drop," "the bird," and "the torch." These, along with a slew of pyramids, formations, and individual acrobatics all combined to add that extra zest to the basketball seasons which no other school in the district managed to capture.

Not only was the squad exciting with the stunts and pyramids, but the girls by themselves did their routines with energy and precision.

The 1981-82 basketball season was quite different from previous years in that the girls basketball games were moved from the winter season to the fall. This splitting up of the girls and boys seasons made it necessary for the JV cheerleading squad to take over and cheer for the Girls' Varsity and JV, instead of the Boys' and Girls' JV as in the past.

This young and inexperienced, but very talented group of girls rose to the occasion and did an excellent job all year long. Their pyramids and formations were on a par with most experienced varsity squads. The girls were great on the sidelines and always managed to get the fans to "pump it up" when our teams needed support.

When the season began, many were skeptical as to whether or not a group that was actually a JV squad could handle Varsity responsibilities, but these doubts were quickly laid to rest when this talented group of girls took the floor.

Thanks to ingenuity, imagination, energy, dedication, and a lot of plain hard work, basketball cheerleading in 1981-82 was fantastic!

Chances increase, girls cash in

A drastic change was thrust upon the Seminole District during the 1981 season. The Girls' Varsity Basketball season was moved from its winter schedule to one set in the fall. This change presented as many problems at RHS as at other schools.

Football games drew spectators from many of the girls' contests, as the two often fell on the same nights. Cheerleading squads were shuffled, and those team members who had formerly served as football cheerleaders lost the chance to do both. The whole situation seemed nothing more than an inconvenience from the onset of the season.

The change of seasons, even with its new inconveniences, did open up a big door for the Devilettes. It gave them the opportunity to compete past the district level, as other districts had always held post-season play at the end of the fall season. With Rustburg being District Champions for the past several years, the chance for them to make the regional playoffs was very good. So, along with its burdens, the change brought opportunity; and when opportunity knocked, the Devilettes answered.

The girls began the season with a big

40-point victory over Nelson County, but were quickly halted by Liberty. At 1-1 they rolled over the rest of the district teams. Then they began to go through the list of teams once more. Again, Nelson County was no match for the Devilettes and Rustburg traveled to Liberty with a 9-1 record. This game resulted in their second loss to the Minettes, their second and final loss of the regular season.

The Devilettes went through the other seven teams (again with ease) to close out the season at 16-2. Other than in the two losses to Liberty, the best competition the girls encountered was in their first contest with Appomattox, where they won 55-50. In the regular season they outscored their opponents 1118-705, by an average margin of 22.9 points per game. The regular season was obviously superb for the Devilettes — but the best was yet to come.

The girls had the home court advantage for the District Tournament, as it was held at Rustburg. They breezed by Nelson County and Altavista in the opening rounds. Seeded second behind the undefeated Minettes, Rustburg was pitted against Liberty for the third time of the season in the championship game. For the third time, the Devilettes lost to the powerful Liberty squad; a 49-44 overtime victory gave the Minettes the District Championship.

As the top two Seminole teams, both Liberty and Rustburg advanced to the first regional action ever seen by Seminole District teams. Rustburg was again the site of play, another first, as our school had never hosted this tournament. Rustburg plowed past Martinsville and muscled over Lexington to earn a spot in the championship game. Their opponents? You guessed it — Liberty!

An old adage states that "He who laughs last laughs loudest." Liberty was still undefeated, and had beaten the Devilettes three times during the season, but when they needed it most, the Rustburg girls came through. They ended the feud by topping Liberty 48-47. Liberty was the champion of the Seminole District, but Rustburg was the Champion of Region III. The Devilettes advanced to the State Tournament in Marion, leaving the Minettes in Bedford.

squad, but by playing in Marion the girls reached a milestone. In the first year that the Devilettes were eligible to compete past the district level, they won the Regional Championship and played in the State Tournament.

A tightly-knit team, the Rustburg squad was made up of strong individuals. Senior center Sarah Jackson and senior forward Marjorie Dyke devastated opposing teams with overpowering defensive play. The uncanny quickness and elusiveness of senior guard Amanda Jackson yielded a multitude of steals and top-of-the-key jumpers that trod on opponents' hopes. Junior forward Kathy Charlton added muscle and sharp defensive abilities to the starting five. Good supporting players were found in Lisa Roberts, Angie Jones, and the rest of the Devilette bench.

And of course there was senior guard-forward Cynthia Lewis. She shattered the RHS record books as she concluded her career with 1564 points. (She missed five games her senior year due to an injury.) She also holds the record for the most points in a single game, with 38.

Cyn had repeatedly been an MVP, and also gained the honor of the 1979-80 Seminole District Player-of-the-Year. She even eclipsed that plateau her senior year by being selected to the first team All-Region III squad.

This was truly a year of firsts. It was the first time our girls had played basketball in the fall, and it was Rustburg's first chance at competition other than at the district level.

It brought Rustburg's first Regional Championship and the first trip to the State Tourney. The Devilettes hosted their first Regional Tournament and Rustburg had its first All-Regional player.

It was also the first year with Mr. Haywood McCrickard as head coach of the girls' team. He combined his knowledge with the expertise of Miss Pat Bell to form a coaching team of unparalleled experience and talent. This new union paid great dividends, and its success was reflected by the team.

This year of firsts in girls' basketball was incredibly successful, and it set a goal for future teams to shoot for.

Young Winners

The 1981-82 Girls' J.V. Basketball Team has been one of the best to come down the pike in a long, long time. With many returning players and a strong front line, the Baby Devilettes made short work of everyone in the district with exception of Liberty, who is always a formidable opponent in girls' basketball, and has become a bit of a nemesis for RHS.

The season began with a low scoring, hard fought contest at Liberty, and the first of two season losses. Then the youngest Devilettes romped for a seven game winning streak, but arch rival, Liberty, met them in Rustburg, and the Minettes defeated them 41 to 33.

The final seven games were easy wins for the girls as they rounded out an outstanding 14 and 2 season. No one had expected such a fantastic performance, but hard work and enthusiasm paid off, carrying the team to the second spot in the district. The younger players saw much more playing time than expected and did a super job when they were called upon.

Co-captains, Kim Lair and Teresa Buchanan, played a major role on the squad, not only as leaders, but as outstanding players on the floor. Teresa had the second highest scoring average on the team with 11 points per game followed by Kim with 9. Kim was voted most valuable player for her defense as well as her offense.

Other top scorers for the team were Angie Brown, who was the high scorer with a 13 point average, and Rhonda Burks with 9.

This outstanding group of young ladies brought a thrill to JV basketball that has been missing in the last few years. Their energy and skill will be great assets to Varsity in the future.

Surprise, surprise!

How well can a cross country team be expected to do when it enters a season with only a few returning runners, a mass of new recruits, and a new coach? Most people would say that such a team would be doomed from the start. Why, they even had a new manager, but they finished the season with the best record in the Seminole District.

The season was certainly one of surprises for the Red Devils. They began with a stunning victory over Staunton River, which was followed by wins over Alta Vista, Group AAA Amherst, and Nelson County. The team which, in most peoples' minds should have been faring poorly, was literally running away with every meet. The Runnin' Red Devils continued, burning VES and Liberty.

Next, more surprises. The leading team in the District accidentally missed the Lynchburg Invitational Meet, where it would have been the favorite. Then it began to lose. Lackluster performances against Brookville and Jefferson Forest closed out the season. Bill Henderson, Kevin Milton, Ed Gregory, Randy Laverdi, Ricky Barley, Ronald Archer, and team captain Mark Rolfes qualified for the District Meet. Slack running yielded a score of 58, third behind the Bees and Cavaliers, both of which they had just lost to.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the season was newcomer, and MVP, Ed Gregory. He did well enough in the District Meet to go on to the Regional Meet. He did well enough there to advance to the State competition, where he finished 58th of 132 runners. If Coach Tom Tweedy had not been a rookie himself, he surely would have exclaimed, "Where has this Gregory kid been all my life?"

It was a surprising season, but these guys got the job done. They won the regular season - a nice surprise.

Experience "pumps it up" for Devils

When speaking about the 1981-82 Varsity Boys' Basketball season, one can't help but think what a fantastic finish it was for the senior players. This squad was predominately made up of seniors, most of whom either started or were frequent substitutes for the starters.

The year, although very successful over all, started off on a bad note with the Devils losing to Nelson County 54-63. The team bounced back, however, and went on a three game romp over Liberty, Gretna, and Jefferson Forest, finally losing in a fluke to the Altavista Colonels. Upset at having broken their winning streak, their determination sent them on an even longer five game streak. The Devils took their frustration out on Brookville and William Campbell in the Campbell County Tournament to declare themselves Campbell County's finest for 1981-82. They went on to defeat Buckingham, Brookville, and William Campbell in victories of near blow-out proportions.

Their streak was to be broken once again, however, in a hard-fought battle with the blue and gray of Appomattox.

The angry Devil warriors then proceeded to make mincemeat of their next four opponents: Gretna, Jefferson Forest, Buckingham, and Altavista to reconcile their grief at losing to Appomattox.

Nelson County turned out to be somewhat of a nemesis for the Devils as they beat them for the second time (51-54). The team came on strong, however, to Bringing the ball down court is senior guard Bill Scott, as he prepares to weave through the opponent's defense. Fine offensive play brought a 57-36 triumph for the Devils over the Jefferson Forest Cavaliers.

Don't blink or you won't see him is good advice, as Thomas Jefferson is poised to attempt to strip the ball from his opponent. Jefferson's outstanding defensive play, along with the rest of the team's abilities, led to a walloping victory over Brookville, 65-35.

It takes concentration to box out William Campbell's Charles Haley on the rebound, as Orlando Burks and Bill Scott prepare for a possible foul shot rebound. This concentration resulted in an easy win for the Devils, 71-51.

round out their 16-4 season with four straight wins.

There was a new record for most career points set by all-district center Lincoln Wood, who averaged 20.95 points per game and had 419 points on the year. Thomas "T.J." Jefferson was the second highest scorer with an average of 10.5 points per game. While Lincoln, a definite college prospect, was famous for his play under the goal and for his superb middle-distance jumpers, "T.J." was an absolute sensation with his fast footwork and ball handling. Thomas led the team in steals and was excellent on the fast break. Another sensational player was senior guard, Mark Rolfes. Fans loved to watch Mark's spectacular defensive efforts and 20 foot jump shots. His quick feet and hands on the court earned him the nickname "Mr. Hustle." Mark also led the team in foul shot percentage and holds the school record for this percentage with a mark of 92%. Seniors Orlando Burks and Bill Scott rounded out the starting seniors, while Eric Scott was the only starting underclassman. Considering the predominant force that the class of 82 has been in the outcome of the season it's members will certainly agree that the year has been a fantastic finish for their high school career.

With the skill and dedication of all of the players plus the coaches, Mr. McCrickard and Mr. Miller, the team finished with one of its best seasons ever, making RHS very proud.

With a look of total concentration, Donnie Marr prepares to shoot a last second foul shot to ice a blow out victory 71-51, over William Campbell, as his teammates and coaches rejoice in the background.

Keeping the "stats" is a complicated process as managers Matt Beard and Timmy Rolfes discover.

The entire first string, along with Coaches McCrickard and Miller, relax for a few minutes in a comfortable lead while they watch the second string perform. An easy win came to the Devils, who topped Appomattox 62-48.

The comeback kids

One indication of how well a varsity team will do is how well the junior varsity team did. If that is a good indication, next year's varsity team should do pretty well. The JV's improved from a 1-13 season in 1980-81 to a 12-6 year in 1981-82.

It is hard to say what caused such a drastic improvement over the previous season. Maybe it was an influx of new talent. Perhaps Coach Mike Bennett came up with a new coaching philosophy. Whatever it was, no one complained.

The Baby Devils opened up the season against one of the tougher teams — Nelson County. They lost by a 12 point decision, but bounced back to beat Liberty and Gretna. They next lost a heart-stopper against Jefferson Forest, 56-55, but once again came back to beat Altavista, Buckingham, Brookville, and William Campbell. The first half of the season ended with a 3 point loss to league leading Appomattox.

The second half of the season began with a tough loss to Gretna. They then got revenge against Jefferson Forest and, three games later, over Nelson County. Victories over Buckingham, Altavista, Brookville, and William Campbell completed a six game winning streak. The season ended with heartbreaking losses to Liberty and Appomattox, both with scores of 46-44.

Who would have imagined that a team that was 1-13 could improve enough over a year to win 66 percent of its games the following year? That's exactly what the Rustburg JV's did, and the school was very proud. Behind the leadership of Brian Anderson, Danny Angel, Jerry Franklin, Scott Gunter, Bernard Jefferson, and Mickey Paige, and the astute coaching of Mr. Bennent, the team turned around the record books with an astounding season.

Coach Michael Bennett gives instructions during the opening seconds of the game at Brookville. Good coaching led to the Devils' victory.

Coach Bonnie Jennings instructs her girls on how to handle a tough Gretna team. The instructions paid off as the team won the match 3-1.

Senior Marjorie Dyke delivers an insurance point with this forceful serve on the team's way to defeating Jefferson Forest. After a slow start, the girls came back to down the Cavalettes.

Senior standout Amanda Jackson goes to her knees to save a shot against Jefferson Forest, as teammates Sarah Jackson and Mitzi Childress look on. The Devillettes won the match 3-1.

The sets and the spikes

Boom . . . SMACK! These are the sounds of volleyball. The expert setter places the ball high and toward the net, creating a soft, hollow, but strong sound. Feet leave the floor, and the opposition closes its eyes, only hearing the smack on the spiker's hand slamming the ball over the net and to the floor.

For Rustburg volleyball fans, this setter-spiker combination came often by way of Mitzi Childress and Sarah Jackson. Several times per match a semi-deep shot came to Sarah. She delivered the ball to Mitzi, who popped it high and with a trajectory that would bring it down over the net. Sarah moved up and up, crashing the net and swatting the ball to the floor in the opponent's court.

The team consisted of other excellent players in Amanda Jackson, Marjorie Dyke, and Sherry McDaniel. All three were strong all-around players, and all held awesome potential to set and to spike.

Ruth Anderson and Telina Hiser were the outstanding players-off-the-bench. Ruth's strong point was back-court play, while Telina devastated opponents with her rifling serve; she led the team in service points.

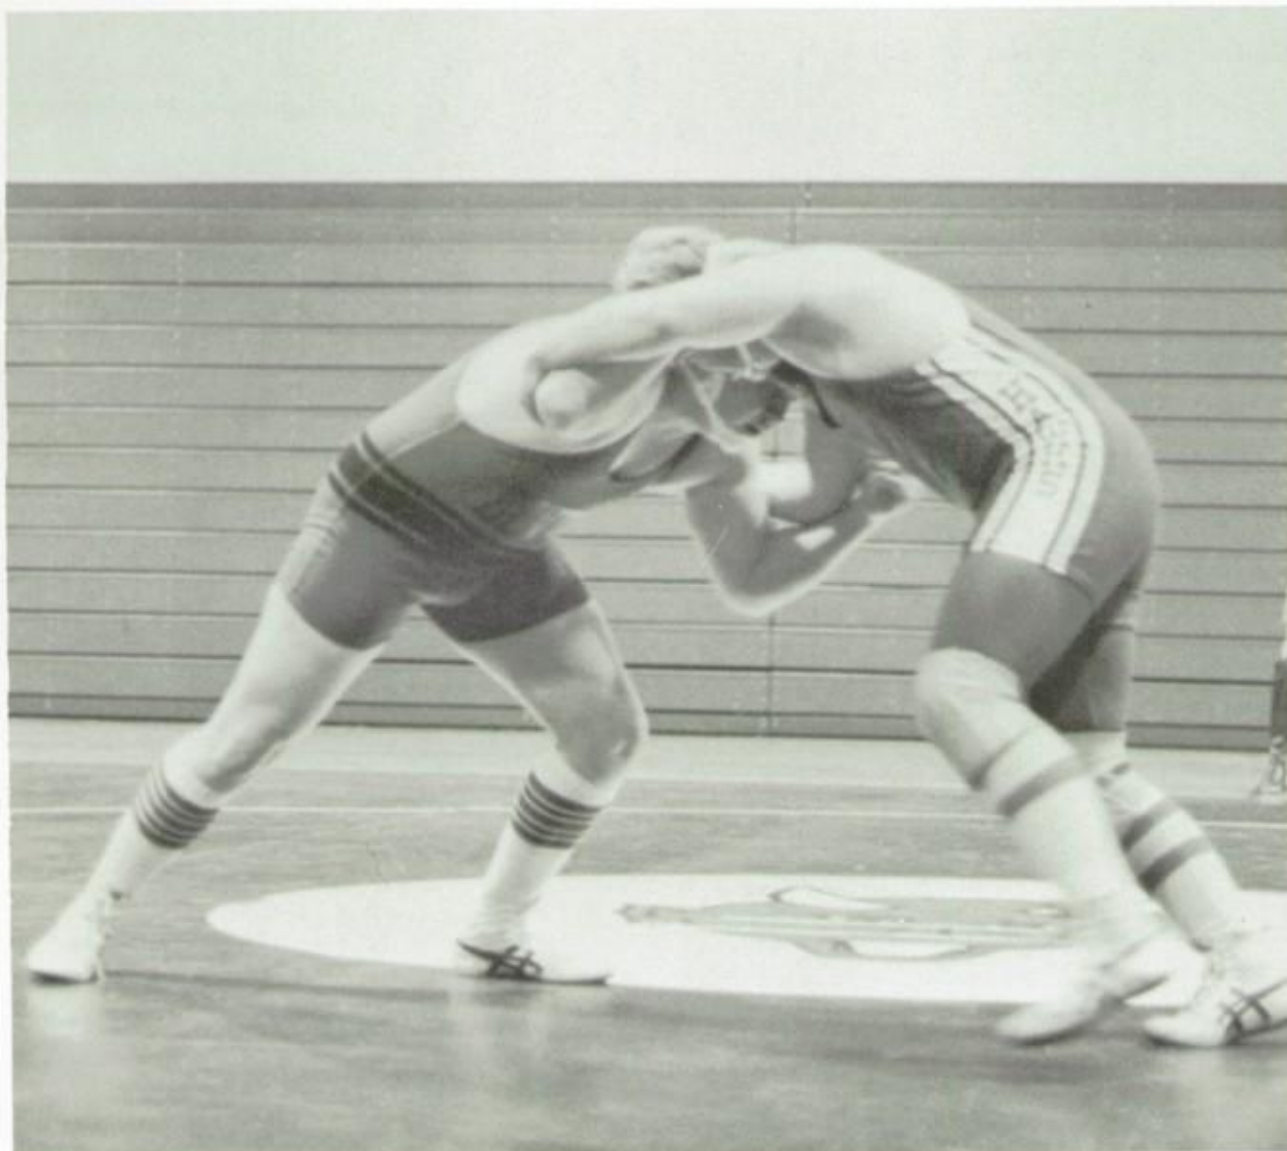

After coasting through the first three matches, the 1982 Volleyball Team plowed through the rest of the Seminole District. The girls dropped matches to Appomattox, Liberty, and Nelson County. They then bounced back to defeat Jefferson Forest, Gretna, Altavista, William Campbell, and Brookville. Their 5-3 record was topped off by consistently precise teamwork and determination.

Much of the team's success was due to their coach, Mrs. Bonnie Jennings. She played for Rustburg at one time, and she passed along her experience and expertise to the girls.

Success in

As everyone realized, the wrestling team was very young; 1981-82 was only the third year that the team competed in the district. The team's cumulative 1-7 record was reflective of that fact, but the intervention of a new coach produced the best individual success ever at Rustburg.

When Coach Marshall Turner returned to Virginia Tech to work on his Master's Degree, the problem of finding a new wrestling coach arose. The county couldn't have found a better one, as we attained Mr. Chris Conkwright, a former ACC champion and a coach at Va. Tech. Coach Conkwright brought holds and techniques never before seen at Rustburg. His indepth knowledge of wrestling and his coaching abilities led to the progress of the individual wrestlers.

Of these wrestlers, Renwick Perry, Shannon Fauber, and Mike Albright placed as runners-up in the District Championships. At the Region III Tournament, Albright narrowly missed qualifying for the State Tournament.

The forgotten sport

Sometimes people tended to forget that there was such a sport as indoor track. The meets were held on Saturdays at Lynchburg College, so few fans attended or even knew about them. This, however, didn't discourage the dedicated athletes who participated. Their opponents were their audience.

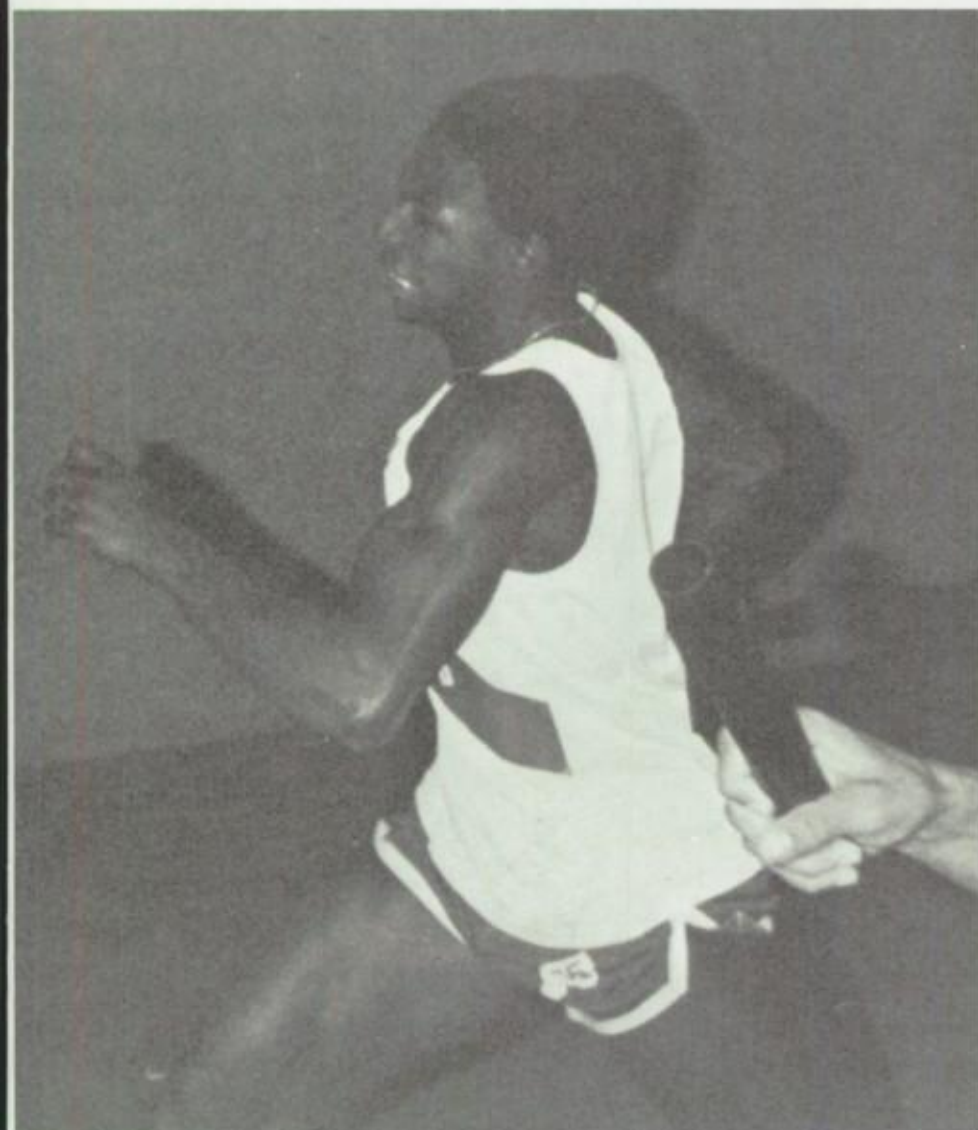

The fact that the meets were held on Saturdays gave students who played other sports a chance to participate. Orlanda Burks played basketball, but he still got up early on Saturday mornings to hurl that shot-put for indoor track. David Moore was a stuntman for the cheerleaders on weekdays, but he still competed in the mile relay and field events at the track meets.

The 1982 Indoor Track Team had quality athletes. They trained hard for competition every day after school, and their discipline paid off as they did very well in the meets . . . The forgotten sport lived on.

Academics

The classroom was the foundation for the true success of the 1981-82 school year at Rustburg High School. The academic side of students' lives was the basis of our "all together" year.

Among the changes in the academic program was the switch from a 9-weeks grading period to a 6-weeks one. This provided some advantages for teachers as they didn't have to fill out interim reports and for students since they knew exactly how they were progressing throughout the year. Some of the disadvantages were that teachers had to complete report cards more often and students had a difficult time of bringing up their grades. Another change was the addition of an advanced chemistry class to the curriculum. The students of first and second periods found the course fun!

Academics took a turn for the better during the year. We developed a unity with each other and with the faculty which enabled us to make the most of our time. This special unity inside the classroom provided for a year of getting it all together in academics!

The upstairs hall appears deserted in the late afternoon except for Lisa Smith, who is deciding which books she needs to take home.

The biggest concern

There are many aspects of high school life that concern students. They worry about how to raise money for a date, whether they will be able to go to the big game, or even who they will be going to the next dance with. But the biggest concern of students is their studies.

There were various academic programs available to students. Some students chose to take classes which would prepare them for college, while others chose the vocational program. Vo. Tech was a major factor in the training of students in certain fields, while the Advanced Placement program helped in preparing college bound students.

Whatever the individual program of each student happened to be, they all had one thing in common — exams! Exam time is one of the hardest parts of any school year. Usually it is confined to a week of preparation and a few days of testing, but not this year. An onslaught of snow, sleet, and freezing rain caused the postponement of the exams for almost two weeks. This definitely had an effect on the performance of the students, and the whole student body breathed a heavy sigh of relief when the exams were finally over.

Although students were involved in a lot of extra-curricular activities, the academic side of high school life was never forgotten.

Busily at work are Tim Pritchett and Marie Loving as they complete an assignment in art class.

Staring in disbelief, Pam Smith pauses for a minute to listen to her teacher's explanations.

The snow and ice covers most of the faculty parking lot and the sidewalks around the main doors of the building, making walking conditions a little hazardous.

Government classes require weekly current events and Robin Lewis and Sherry McDaniel make good use of the newspapers in the library to catch up on some of the latest happenings.

Keith Bryant

One day at a time

There exists, among underclassmen, a common misconception that seniors "have it easy." Contrary to popular belief, senior life is not merely a bowl of cherries.

After a taste of the senior academic agenda, even the most envious underclassmen will admit that senior life is anything but paradise.

Those who look for greener grass on the senior's side may discover that grass doesn't grow on a busy street at all. Some seniors, like Keith Bryant, tried no less than to smother themselves with weighted courses. Let's follow Keith's schedule for one day.

1st Period — Mrs. Anne Greene's Analysis Class. No, the limit is not how much work teachers give students before they have nervous breakdowns. The limit in calculus, after all, can approach zero. Along with limits, the students also learned how to differentiate. It sounded simple enough, until Mrs. Greene explained what the process involves.

"You see, delta x and dx are the same thing, but delta y and dy are not. Does that make sense?" Mrs. Greene smiled at her class. Her students didn't want to disappoint her; so, for the time being, they just smiled right back.

2nd period — Mr. Glenn Reichard's Advanced Chemistry Class. The class spent more time on the feet than in the seat during their 2-hour exam. One question from the written part asked the class to duplicate a deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) molecule. Everyone concluded that cells do a lot better job than pens and pencils.

After the written part was completed, students were allowed time to stretch, but only while they performed 3 lab experiments on a single unknown solution.

There may be easier days ahead, though, as the class will begin statistical calculation, where the main thing that "counts" is a calculator.

3rd period — Mr. William Skinner's AP English Class. "So far, only 3 people have passed the exam," Mr. Skinner revealed to his class. "But I haven't graded the essay part yet."

Well, all hope wasn't gone. Just most of it. As the second semester began, students found that they had no time to waste on first semester's exam. Before the end of the period, the students had taken a check test on Hawthorne's The House of the Seven Gables, rescheduled their reading assignments for the next 3 weeks, were warned of an essay test to be taken the next day, were handed a 65 page play to read in 2 days, and were given a 500 page novel, Melville's Moby Dick, to read in their "spare time."

When asked if the class would be a struggle, one student replied, "Not yet. In a couple of weeks, it'll get tough."

4th period — Mr. Neal Fletcher's Advanced Problems in Science Class. For some people, bringing home the bacon is life's toughest problem; but for this class, just finding the bacon is a job in itself.

Having completed tests on the cat's skeleton and muscles of the fetal pig, Mr. Fletcher decided, "Today we will begin the internal anatomy of the pig. Have your specimen cut open by the end of the period for inspection."

After the heavy sighs came intense probing and labeling of organs, membranes, and vessels. At the end of the period, one student asked while drying his hands, "What is for lunch today, anyway?"

"Pork sausage, what else?" was the reply.

5th period — Mrs. B.J. Reid's AP Government Class. The class held a mock Congress. Mock is right. The House of Representatives never looked better. Bills such as sentencing juveniles as adults and requiring blood types to be printed on drivers licenses just might become laws, considering the debating they survived in the class.

The students learned the process of the House of Representatives, and became more aware of the important issues our nation is facing today. Some of the students even want to become politicians. What can't Mrs. Reid accomplish?

6th period — This is supposed to be Keith's study hall. However, when he's not talking to Mrs. Dotson in the Guidance Office about college, he can be found in Mrs. Greene's Advanced Math Class.

He took this class last year, but he wants to refresh his memory, and maybe even pick up on something new. "Last year we didn't work with all the Trig formulas like the class is this year," Keith said. So, the last class of the day is somewhat of a breather for Keith. This hour provides a well deserved break from a very hectic schedule.

Before a test in Advanced Government Class, Ann Fletcher, Keith Bryant, David Rath, and Dawn Kidd look through their notes.

The skeleton of a cat serves as a model for seniors Terry Lewis and David Moore in their Advanced Problems in Science Class.

Although the popular Rubik's cube can become very frustrating Nancy Jones keeps her cool while trying to solve the puzzle.

Preparing for their debuts, Troy Coleman and Donnie Marr rehearse their lines one more time.

One day at a time (con't.)

They begin to drive to school, instead of riding the bus; they celebrate the reception of their class ring, and they are not required to take P.E. They are juniors.

What do juniors do with the extra period they have in place of P.E.? Whatever they want. Efficient students concentrate on courses of the field in which they plan to make their careers. For junior Wanda Blankenship, business is the field. Looking at her courses, we see that business means busy-ness, indeed.

1st period — Mrs. Carolyn Bushong's English Class. Students in this class learn that there is more to communication than love letters and phone calls. It involves basics like grammar, diction, and word choice to "get the message across."

Laughter echoed in the classroom as students mocked strange accents. Mrs. Bushong failed to get her point across; maybe next time she'll write a love letter.

2nd period — Mr. Robert Miller's Consumer Math Class. This economic class teaches students to manage financially by practicing check writing and budget balancing.

This kind of math everyone needs to keep his wallet in shape, and it helps students get jobs. The students work toward a sound mind and sound body, but in consumer math, that is achieved only through a sound banking account.

3rd period — Mrs. Nancy Gregory's Stenography I Class. Being a secretary is no piece of cake. It takes years of training, and one step in the process is stenography class. Skills range from learning to write shorthand by phonics to working with office calculators.

According to Mrs. Gregory, office practice skills come in handy even if a person doesn't become a secretary. "One cannot be a secretary, though, without the stenographic skills we teach."

4th period — Mrs. Nancy Gregory's Stenography I Class. It requires the ability and hand-eye coordination of a concert pianist; typing is an art form that must be practiced before perfected.

In Mrs. Gregory's class, students give typing productions to help increase speed while diminishing errors from work. This pressure proves to be an invaluable drill for typists who fear that they may get a J.R. Ewing for a boss someday.

5th period — Mrs. Anne Greene's Art IV Class. Art, art, art. For years these students have drawn, painted, or sculpted every imaginable object.

Students show that thinking on their own can lead to mixed results. For those who are able to find a fresh topic to work with, Mrs. Greene builds confidence and gives encouragement. "It's coming along. It'll be all right. Really." Maybe lying is a form of art after all.

6th period — Mrs. Janice Lacks' History Class. For students who wonder why we take history, a very good answer came from Mrs. Lacks, "We learn from our mistakes." After that interesting statement, she succeeded in drawing applause and a few whistles as she announced an open book test.

Taking advantage of some free time in the library are Becky Baker and Stephanie Comer as they take a break from their work.

Art student Teresa Floyd dips some more clay out of the bowl for a project she's working on.

Painting tiny lines on light-switch plates can be a tedious experience as Susan Emerson proves as she concentrates intently on her work.

Learning how to operate a cash register is one assignment in Mr. Dale White's DE class that junior Zina Silver can perform with ease.

Juniors John Dowdy, John Burleigh, and Jimmy Jewell work with a drill press in the shop.

One day at a time (con't.)

What is it like being a sophomore? Well, the novelty of high school has faded. Tenth graders are neither the youngest nor the oldest, so they seem to get little attention.

It's sort of like being the middle child of the high school family. But most of all, the sophomore year for most students is the year to begin preparation for the future. Students like Pam Smith are planning ahead with each course they take; as her schedule indicates.

1st period — Miss Debra Guthrie's Geometry Class. What is 10 proof and has strange effects on the mind when too much is given? No, it's not an alcoholic beverage, it's Miss Guthrie's homework assignments.

After working with rhombi, trapezoids, and other odd shapes, dizziness is a common side effect. But students found that it takes clear and logical minds to prove angles congruent with theorems.

3rd period — Mr. Dale White's Distributive Education Class. Students who want to find a good job without acquiring a college education will be "sold" on this class. To allow the students to get a taste of the world of marketing and advertising, Mr. White video-taped student commercials. Not only do students learn to sell products, they also learn to sell themselves — to employers. They work with job applications and even have job interview contests. None of Mr. White's students will find themselves unemployed for too long.

4th period — Mr. Russell Dufford's Health and P.E. Class. Between days of strenuous volleyball and basketball, sophomores have a unique health class. It's called driver's ed., and attempts to make smart, careful, and safe drivers out of each student.

Recently, the class has been learning the parts of a car. While some students would rather learn the parts of the body, knowing where the liver is won't fix the engine of a standard car.

5th period — Mrs. Maude Braford's Home Economics Class. While most couples take vows, students in Mrs. Braford's class fake them during a mock wedding. Skills like sewing and cooking are not enough. The students learn how to make the right choices in life so that they make no costly mistakes.

Marriage is no exception; and recently, the students are learning everything that the word involves. They are told how heredity influences offspring, how to cope with retardation, and other factors to be considered before having children.

6th period — Mrs. Anne Jones' English Class. One of the best ways to end a day is to go out with a bang — vocabulary and composition. When good 'ole' sixth period comes around, almost no one feels like speaking with correct grammar. Almost one one.

Mrs. Jones keeps her class speaking clearly until the end of the day and into the night. The students discussed different kinds of verbs in an exercise designed to make them understand what they read.

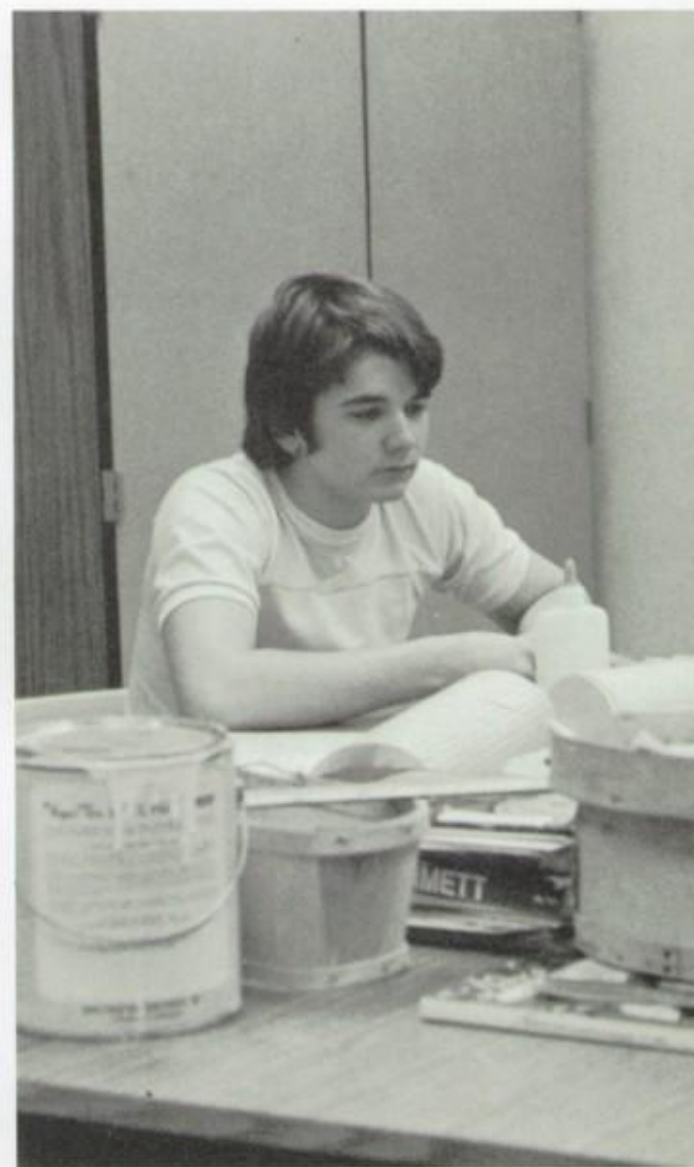

There is no escape from English with Mrs. Jones drilling students for definitions, grammar, and sentence structure.

Pam Smith

After his art lesson, sophomore Wayne Bryant applies what he has learned as he starts his next art project.

Carefully preparing a menu for their Home Economics class are Donnette Reasons and Pam Swanson.

Busily working in her art class, sophomore Marsha Fariss concentrates on making her project the very best.

Preparing themselves for their next algebra test, Dwight Jones, Jamie Dalton, and Shannon Fauber pay close attention to Miss Janet Beard, their teacher.

Members of the chorus use their class time to rehearse for the Christmas Concert.

One day at a time (con't.)

Freshmen: the new kids in town. With high school, they discover a little bit more freedom and a whole lot more responsibility. They can choose some classes on their own, but some are still required.

What does one day of a freshman include at Rustburg? Kirk Leonard's schedule may tell us a little bit.

1st period — Mr. Haywood McCrickard's Health and P.E. Class. Ninth grade Health is the year of first aid, which isn't a bad thing to know after playing basketball every other day.

Recently the class has worked with different diseases, and Mr. McCrickard makes sure his students know the difference between the measles and poison ivy. However, some students still itch to play basketball, which is a clear symptom of first aid fatigue.

2nd period — Mr. Bugs Dodgion's Algebra Class. Mr. Dodgion's class clicks like clockwork. The students methodically check homework, review for a test, and take one each week. There is no room for a wise guy who thinks that the difference of two squares is their sizes.

3rd period — Mrs. Janice Lacks' World Studies Class. Students who enjoy studying the history of the political world would favor this class. While the rise and fall of empires and the conquest of civilization may not help a student get a job, it is beneficial for the student to understand trends in human society.

The better a person understands the world, the better he will function within it. At the moment, Mrs. Lacks becomes content if her students function within the classroom.

4th period — Mr. Keith Carroll's Agriculture Class. In the shop, it's safety first before anything else. The students in this class learn to create with power tools, but when pieces of wood and metal begin to fly across the room, things are getting out of hand. Kirk's present project is a wood lathe.

All in all, the class is not a construction site, though it sounds like one. With all the noise, however, the shop is still safer than your average construction site. Maybe its bark is louder than its bite.

5th period — Mrs. Catherine Taylor's English Class. Ninth graders are introduced to poetry and plays carefully. Mrs. Taylor starts her class out by acting out and reading aloud a play or two, then she shocks them with Shakespeare until each student knows what the playwright consumed for lunch on his 24th birthday. They learn about the Elizabethan theatre and read about plays written during that era.

6th period — Mr. Victor Fleet's Science Class. There is never a boring moment in Mr. Fleet's Natural Science Class. If the students aren't labeling the rocks and minerals of the earth, they are being terrified by Mr. Fleet's playful pet snakes.

The students have been discussing the geological history of the earth for a while; so, Mr. Fleet finally commands, "Take out a writing instrument." That command can only mean a test on geological time periods.

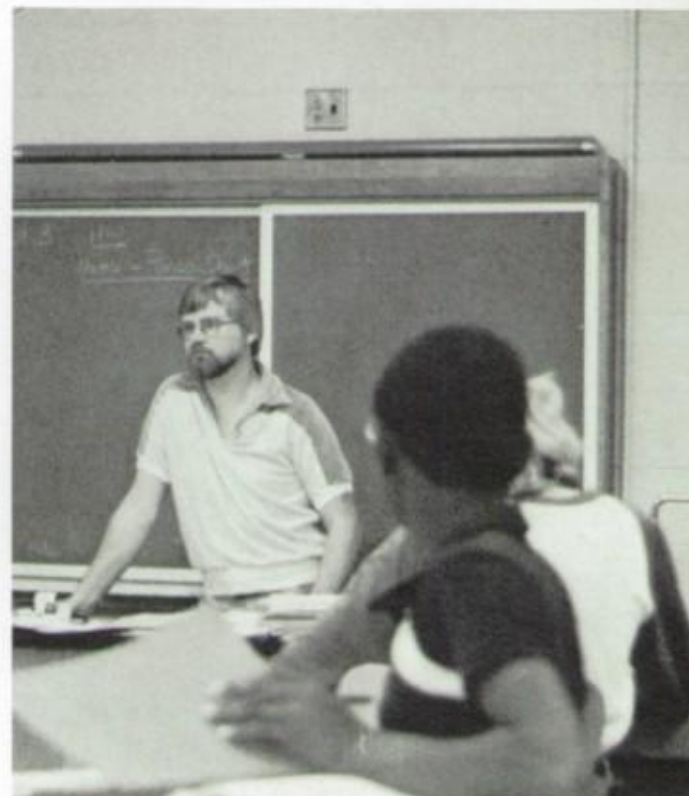

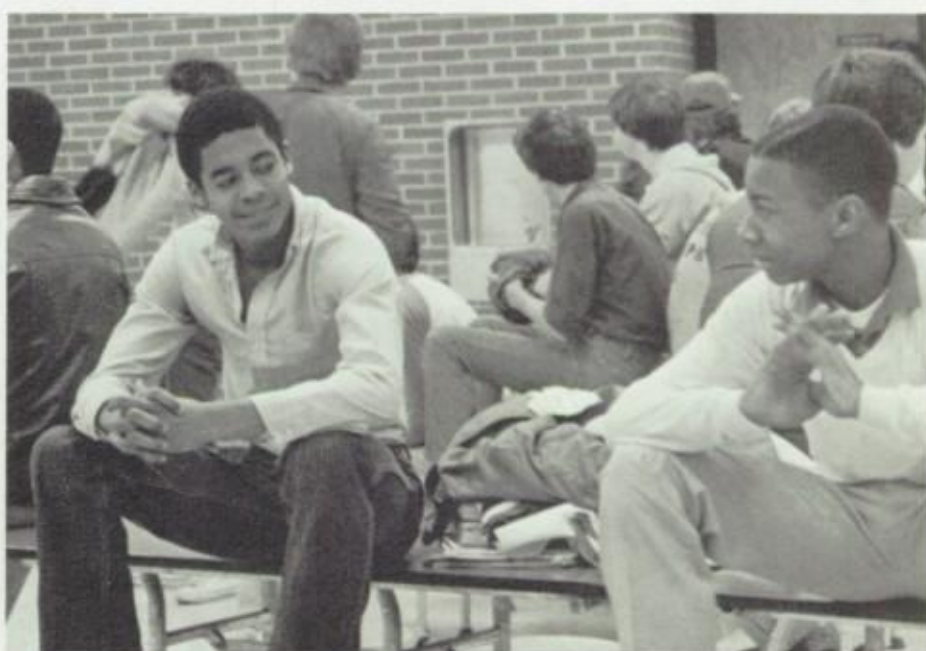

Kirk Leonard

Although gym is not a typical class with desks and books, Tim Rees and David Waller show that participation and hard work are required.

Early in the morning, freshmen Bianca Evans and Pam Smith contemplate the rest of the day's activities.

Mr. Fleet's ninth grade earth science class proves to be an interesting beginning for freshman students as Tracey Yuille readily demonstrates.

Working for perfection, Jane Pugh and Teresa Spraker cook a meal for their Home Economics project.

Patiently waiting for the start of his band class, freshman Elliott Bryant looks over his music.

With a medley of Christmas songs, the chorus group "Fantasia" entertains the audience at the annual Christmas concert.

At the end of the Christmas concert, the Band, under the direction of Mr. Mike Straw, stands as the crowd applauds.

To get the crowd on their feet, the Band prepares to perform the ever-popular school song.

Changes in the arts

The Fine Arts Department of a school usually takes a back seat to the athletic branch in the student body's mind. Most students put a basketball or football game before a concert or play. With the talent and work that students put in, the attitude of indifference toward the arts seems to be changing. The arts in the school are growing as the students' input and interest increase.

The chorus was under the order of a new teacher, Mrs. Ruth Argabright. She is a graduate of Ohio University and Arizona State University, with a Bachelor of Music degree. It took awhile for her to get the chorus together, but by mid-winter "Fantasia" had become a very fine singing organization.

The Drama Department has grown as much as any other. Increased student training paid off at curtain time. Under the direction of Miss Martha Wilson, the department successfully put together such fine productions as Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" and Grant Richards' "Who Killed Aunt Caroline?"

The Art Department continued its fine output of work. It decorated the Commons Area for Christmas and made signs for sporting events. Another collection of fine art work was displayed in the annual Spring Art Show.

Perhaps the most improved department was the Band. A strong program was built by second year teacher Miss Deborah Tate, but she resigned her duties shortly before the Christmas Concert. The vacancy was filled by Mr. Michael Straw, a University of New Hampshire graduate. Even with this major change, the Band amassed more awards during the year than ever before.

As the Fine Arts grew elsewhere, they also grew at Rustburg High — More students become interested in art, drama, and music; and classes grew as more and more talented students emerged.

Improvements to the department also grew in order to compliment and facilitate the increasing interest in the arts. The general opinion of the arts become more positive, as students had more to be proud of. The growing interest in the arts was an exciting trend, one that hopefully will continue to grow.

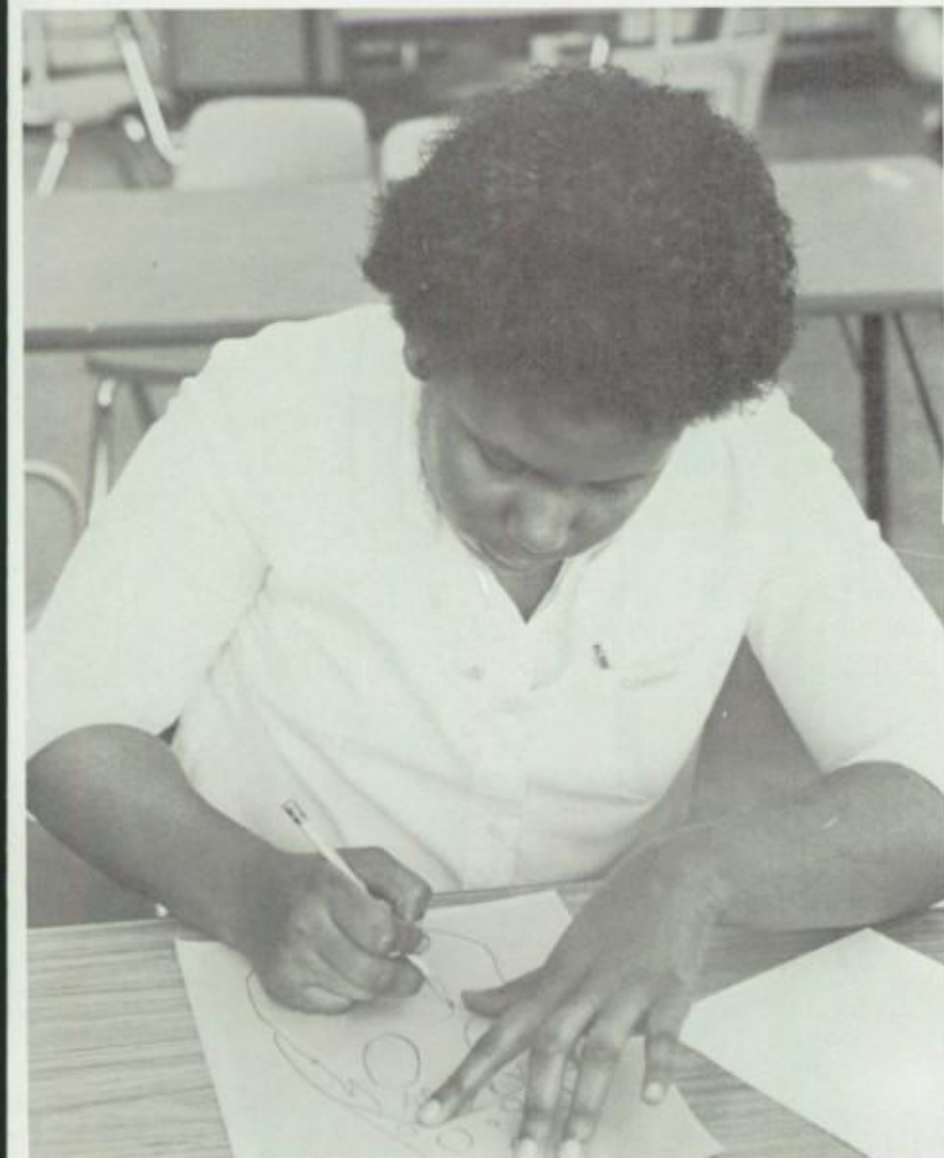

In order to perform well, clarinet players B.J. Harris, Debbie Doss, and Lori Davis carefully concentrate on their music.

On the opening night of the Senior play, Cyndi Watkins, Donnie Marr, and Troy Coleman display their talents in the performance of The Glass Menagerie.

Patiently awaiting her cue, Elizabeth Coffey sits quietly with a solemn look of concentration upon her face.

Diligently working on her drawing for art class, Senior Faye Granger stays after school to complete her assignment.

Organizations

Organizations were a vital part of our successful year; they provided chances for students and faculty members to work and have fun together! The sponsors of the numerous clubs put forth a great deal of planning so that club meetings and activities ran smoothly. Dedicated students who served as officers, along with other club members, donated many hours in order that their endeavors resulted in success.

Various clubs held many important responsibilities which benefitted the entire student body. The '81 Homecoming Carnival and the court procession were taken care of by organizations. The huge Christmas tree in the Commons Area and the blood mobile that brought the school and the community together were other projects which were sponsored by clubs.

Organizations held a big part in students' schedules, as all of the clubs worked hard to reach goals they had set at the beginning of the year. The ability to work diligently and get things done proved that 1981-82 at RHS was a year of getting it all together in organizations!

Rustburg fills the bill

Besides the many extra-curricular activities like sports and JA, there were a great number of academic clubs in which students participated.

The Art Club is an organization sponsored by the art department and Mrs. Gail Lee. Students put on an art exhibit at school which was very impressive to all who viewed it. Some of the students participated in an activity for local high schools at Lynchburg General Hospital to brighten up a drab construction site fence. They painted murals on the once ugly looking plywood boards. One art student came up with the design for the 1981-82 yearbook publication, "The Owl."

DECA was a club for Distributive Education Students. These students received training for their jobs and could work part of the school day on their jobs. The club attended the District Leadership Conference at River Ridge Mall and competed in many job related contests.

The FBLA, Future Business Leaders of America, and sponsor Mrs. Carol Dejarrette organized fund raising activities in order to send students to district and regional conferences. This club helped interested students to learn more about business and the procedures involved in business.

The Future Farmers of America or FFA, with sponsor Mr. Keith Carroll, was an organization of students and teachers who worked towards high goals in the agriculture field. There were workshops and contests held every year. The Agriculture Mechanics teams competed in tractor driving contests, and contests involving dairy, crop, soil and forest judging.

The Future Homemakers of America, with their sponsor Mrs. Maude Braford, was involved in many activities. They sponsored an orphan at Christmas time and participated in a dress review. There were two members who competed on the state level in homemaking competitions.

The 1981-82 Chorus, "Fantasia," put on a Christmas show, and many of the members participated in the spring production of "Who killed Aunt Caroline." These spirited students and their sponsor, Mrs. Ruth Argabright, added a great deal to the Drama Department.

These activities gave participants experience and a chance to work together in academic organizations.

Culture is alive!

Many people thought of RHS as a "country hick" school that was separated from the cultural mainstream. These people didn't know how wrong they were; our cultural clubs and organizations were living proof.

The Band showed steady improvement and achieved award winning status with many of its members being selected for Honors Band and All County Band.

Our Spanish Club was another prime example of culture. With sponsor Ms. Robin Landis, it was one of the strongest clubs in the school. The club visited Hollins College in Roanoke to see a professional flamenco group and participated in our lively Foreign Language Week.

Speaking of culture, we had another cultural center of our own in the French Club and its programs. With sponsor Mrs. Cynthia Camp, this club was another strong school organization. It was one of the most enthusiastic groups we had ever witnessed during Foreign Language Week.

The Latin Club, with sponsor Mr. Bob Shreve, was even more proof of our culture; the brightly colored togas worn during that special week dedicated to foreign language students were evidence enough. After all, ancient Rome was certainly no cultural desert.

With Foreign Language Week upon them, French Club member Lee Tuck and Latin Club member Cyndi Watkins discuss possible costumes for Language Day.

Busy without books

There were many non-academic clubs in which students could participate during their high school career. Among these clubs were the Monogram Club, Varsity Club, Weight Club, National Honor Society, Junior and Senior Councils, Omega Society, and Junior Achievement.

The Varsity and Monogram Clubs were organizations for male and female athletes who had lettered in a varsity sport.

The Weight Club was another athletic club in which many students worked long and hard to achieve the coveted 200 lbs. status which allowed them to buy a weight club T-shirt.

An elite group of outstanding seniors was chosen again by the faculty for the National Honor Society. When nominating a student for the society, his grades, leadership abilities, and integrity were considered.

The Junior and Senior Councils were elected by their respective class to plan activities such as the Ring Dance and the Prom.

The English department started a new club specifically for students interested in the arts. These students often attended plays which were performed in the area.

One of the largest organizations was Junior Achievement. It was a program of national scope designed to give interested students "hands on" experience in corporate business. The students formed their own companies, produced and sold their own products and shared the profits.

The broad ranging scope of clubs and organizations on a non-academic level gave students an opportunity to participate in many interesting extra-curricular activities.

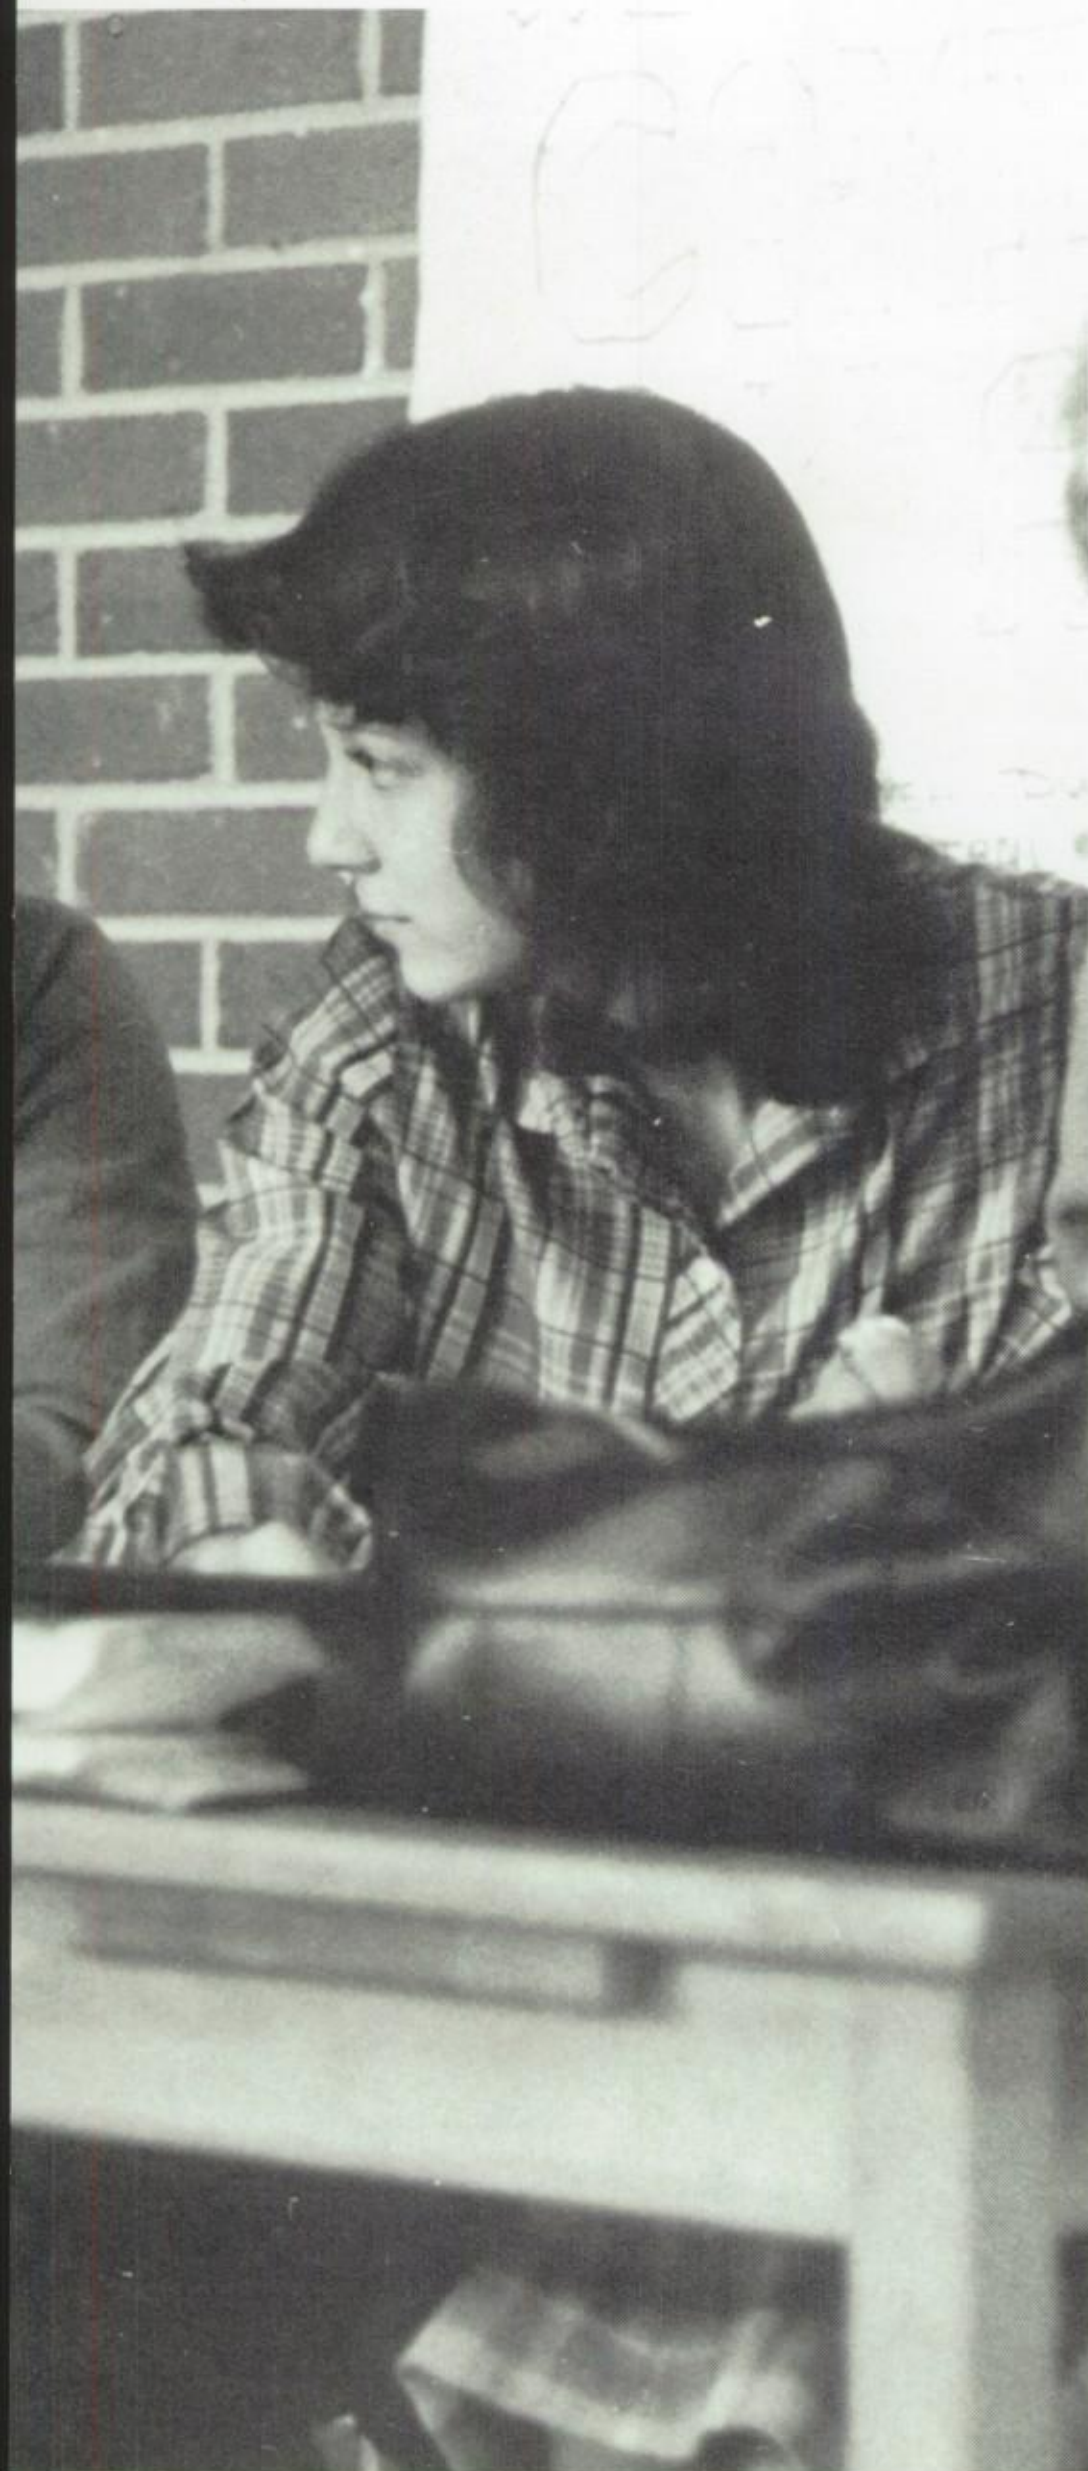

Taking time out from his duties at the Homecoming Carnival to grab a bite to eat is Senior Council member, Mark Rolfes.

Monogram Club members Sandy Smith and Cindy Dodge their part to make the mum sale a success for the varsity football cheerleaders.

Being on the Junior Council involves not only planning and lots of meetings but also hard work for Teresa Floyd.

Students lend a hand

What more could be added to the list of complications in a student's life? There are classes to keep up with and sports activities taking up all of a person's time. What else could there be? Clubs and organizations, of course.

This really shouldn't sound negative because clubs are important to students. They teach values and many lessons which students need to learn. Even so, they take up a lot of time. Students put their spare hours to good use through clubs, however, by providing invaluable services for the school and the community.

Many teachers had student aides. The phasing out of study halls placed students into classrooms where the teachers had the option of employing the students. The aides eased tensions on the teachers by typing, grading tests, and performing other time-consuming chores. With their help, teachers had more time for what is most important — teaching.

The Student Council Association made sure that students kept in touch with the administration and faculty. They helped form the rules which kept order in the school. The SCA also entertained students by sponsoring several funfilled activities.

An indispensable group once again flourished at RHS. SODA partners traveled to area middle schools each week to help teach young students about attitudes and decision making. These dedicated people truly gave of themselves in helping the children.

The Second Brigade was once more a blessing to the Rustburg area. Whenever a fire occurred during business days, Mr. Neal Fletcher and his precision fire-fighting crew of students sped to the fire station on Main Street. They then responded to the calls, actually serving in place of the Volunteer Fire Department. Whenever the intercom called out the phrase, "Second Brigade report," these commendable young men rushed to help keep our community safe.

The administration had help from the student body in the office and library, too. Every day about two dozen students reported in to assist in secretarial and office-related work. They took a lot of pressure off their "bosses," and their help was greatly appreciated.

Students proved they were not in school just for a good time by providing greatly-needed services throughout the school and the area. They made responsible choices to "lend a hand," and they did a fine job.

Informants serve all

Of the many clubs and organizations in the school, perhaps the most useful were those that provided services. These clubs improved the school and the community, while teaching the members valuable skills.

Christ in Teens was a club which served to get Christ into teens and vice versa. The club performed valuable service projects for the school and community, as it kept its members in touch with Christ. This service club was sponsored by Mr. Fleet.

The Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs were very similar in their purpose and goals. They worked in conjunction with each other on several projects, but the highlight of the year came in April, when they co-sponsored a bill at the 1982 Model General Assembly. Hi-Y was sponsored by Mr. Shearer, while Tri-Hi-Y was sponsored by Mrs. Lacks and Mrs. Rudder.

Every morning on the announcements was a weather report and forecast. This service was provided by the Weather Team, under the guidance of Mr. Neal Fletcher.

All of these organizations served as informants or improvement agencies for the school, while teaching members skills and values.

Those deadly deadlines

Many of our school activities prepared students for life by teaching certain skills. Every day about 30 students worked on the newspaper and yearbook staffs, learning how to put together publications while putting out products for the student body.

The newspaper staff produced three issues of "The Devil's Advocate," which was sponsored by Mrs. Bonnie Jennings, during the 1981-82 school year. Each issue contained stories and features by the staff, along with reports on our athletic endeavors. It also ran editorials and artwork done by students.

The yearbook staff devoted long hours to producing the 1982 volume of "The Owl." Every day during fourth period one could see the drawings of layouts and hear the banging of typewriters. The staff consisted of sixteen students, each devoting time to a different section. This crew, under the guidance of Mrs. Anne Greene, suffered headaches and set-backs until February 20th, the day of its last deadline.

The literary magazine, "Whiffles and Burbles," was once again produced by the yearbook staff in conjunction with the English department and the advanced art classes. English and art teachers submitted students' work for consideration to make up the award winning magazine.

Working on the newspaper, yearbook, and literary magazine taught many students the art of publications. Hard work by these students yielded the fine products that were enjoyed by the entire school.

People

The people who made up our family were of various personalities. Everyone possessed his own unique style, but in a sense, we were all very much alike.

We all hated getting up at the unheard of hour of 7:00 a.m., we all hated Monday meat (which was served in different shapes and given other names the rest of the days of the week), and we all hated the studying that we had to do if we wanted to pass.

On the other hand, we all loved participating in interesting group projects and we all loved the hours before and after school we spent together laughing about the times we'd had or planning good times yet to come. We all loved that togetherness that filled every hall, every classroom, and every corner of Rustburg High School.

Our school, like any other school, was separated into four classes, and everyone from freshmen to seniors received his share of ridicule, but those four classes got it together to make one of the strongest student bodies ever.

Coming through

With a look of total disillusionment, Jimmy Womack thinks about what his Senior year has in store for him as he relaxes in the Commons area after school.

When looking at the performances of the senior class over past years, it is clear that we have been a dominant force. We have been prominent both academically and athletically.

In academic competition seniors have proven their excellence. In Forensics we claimed both District and Regional Championships. We sent six outstanding students to Boys' and Girls' State and two students qualified and were nominated to attend the Governor's School for the Gifted. When compared with seniors from other county schools, the '82 Devils are on top with the best SAT scores.

Athletically, we have guided our teams to numerous honors. We have done well on the district level in football, cross country, volleyball, baseball, and basketball. Region III crowns have been won in track and basketball. Several seniors have also been named to All-District and All-Regional teams in various sports.

The Arts have provided a medium for still more seniors to stand out. There are brilliant art students representing our class, while other seniors dedicate time to music. Many seniors have participated in All-County and All-Regional bands.

We have helped the new Rustburg High School develop. Our big red 82 on the water tower will soon be painted over, but our spirit will remain. We have made our mark.

The first football pep rally against Liberty raised the spirit of the whole school, especially seniors Teresa Cunningham, Lorrie Lindsey, Cheryl Pollard, Kim Taylor, and Kristi Claybrook.

At the top

The Class of '82 is one of spirit. We worked our way up the school's social ladder until we were on top. But even before we became filled with the enthusiasm of being seniors, we won spirit sticks and class competitions. We showed our spirit early in the game as freshmen, and we became increasingly stronger every year.

The liveliness of the seniors was never confined to RHS. When we weren't rallying pep at school, we invaded other places to show our spirit. Some senior hangouts were the Fort Avenue Pizza Hut and the new River Ridge Mall. We went to the mall before football and basketball games to browse, eat, and relieve some of the pressures of the school day. After the games, pizza places were kept open into the A.M. to accommodate eager Red Devils.

As the number of seniors (232) indicated, we are a strong class. We have worked hard to achieve our goals but not by individual strength. Rather, we have put to use the power of working together; to learn, to achieve, to win. We got it all together right from the beginning to develop a spirit we can be proud of!

Domination

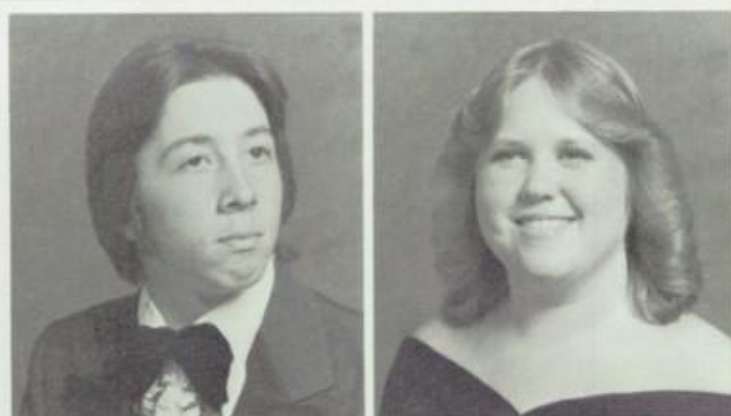

Like all other teenagers, we seniors focus a lot of our attention on sports. Sports are a constructive way to relieve tensions, as they also build the body. Seniors led each of the competitive teams, and when not competing ourselves we kept informed of the sports world by spectating.

An example of how important seniors were to the sports program can be seen in the football team. It was made up of about 35 players. The team was led by a strong group of seniors; 17 in all. Leadership of this type by the senior class was apparent in all sports.

Not only did we play sports well, we also cheered for them well. A fine example of this was the student spirit section at home basketball games. It was constantly electrified, and it helped the girls' basketball team become the Regional Champions.

An interview with Manager Dusan of the Lynchburg Mets gives Dawn Kidd an excellent article for the school newspaper.

Growing up

When we became seniors, we found ourselves taking on newer and bigger responsibilities. One of the major worries was trying to maintain a decent grade point average while making a little spending money from a part time job. We also had to deal with the college boards and deciding to which college to apply.

On the other hand, new responsibilities weren't the only things on our minds. Growing older meant more freedom and more chances to go places and do things on our own. Our parents felt that they no longer had to accompany us everywhere we went. There were still many fun activities that we could take part in. We went to parties given in honor of victories on the fields and courts, and celebrated at the various hang-outs. The final privilege for many of us will occur when we hit the beach after graduation.

Schoolwork is not the only thing that interests senior Gerry Leffers, as demonstrated by his making a crucial shot on his pool table at home.

A very special night

Seniors make their last year special by placing emphasis on certain events. This year one of the most special times for the members of the senior class was Homecoming. The many unique events taking place during this period made Homecoming '81 a week to be remembered.

The seniors led the school through this spirited time by dressing appropriately every day of spirit week. The Homecoming pep rally was a huge success.

A dark cloud did come over this otherwise beautiful day. Literally. The Homecoming football game was rained out, nevertheless, King candidates Edgar Anderson, Mike Cash, and Mike Fariss and Queen Candidates Mitzi Childress, Michelle Mason, and Kelly Riley were announced.

The game was postponed until Saturday night. We tasted victory when Nelson County fell to the Red Devils 20-0. The evening was complete with the crowning of Edgar Anderson and Michelle Mason as King and Queen.

After the game, the final touches were made on a perfect night with the music of Bobby Wade at the dance as everyone boogied on into the A.M.

The week of Homecoming was wonderful, especially for the seniors. The entire school seemed to be dedicated to making the week very memorable for the Class of '82, since it was their last Homecoming. The effort was truly appreciated — Homecoming was fabulous.

High atop the tower, the water tank shows passers-by that the Class of '82 remains the best.

Sheer delight is shown on the faces of Queen candidate Michelle Mason and King Candidate Mike Cash as they walk through the archway that the band forms.

Proud of being a Queen and King candidate, respectively, Kelly Riley and Edgar Anderson smile for the crowd during Homecoming half-time.

Party time!

The best day to look for the spirit and general craziness of seniors is Friday. When we hear that final bell, it's time to release the tension built up over the week. Unusual antics can be seen around school for a couple of hours after dismissal, as seniors generate energy for the activities of the evening.

Next on the agenda is the big basketball or football game. We cheer our teams on throughout hard fought battles and easy wins alike.

More often than not we come out of the struggle on top. Then it's celebration time. We go to a pizza place or to a party. No matter where the last bit of fun is, after a week of hard school work and tough physical work, it's now time to really cut loose.

The Berserk game at 7-11 is being challenged by David Moore, as Jimmie Womack, Tony Hirtz, and Christa Lambert cheer him on.

Studying

By the time students become seniors, less is required from them academically. We had taken all of the classes required to graduate when we entered this school year. The only courses we needed were government and English.

The poetry course drew in many students, while a few dared to take AP English. US Government catered to the tastes of most seniors, while a few partook of AP Government. We did not restrict ourselves to the required classes; we extended our interest to the various electives.

Most seniors were wise enough to take courses that would benefit them later in life. Many learned trades at the Vo. Tech. Center as others took courses in hopes that they would help them in college. Conscientious choices such as these characterized seniors' responsibilities toward their futures.

Concentrating hard on their English assignment, Dawn Kidd, Karen Jones, and Liz Miller look intent, as Barry Payne doesn't seem to take matters too seriously.

Night Owls

Bzzz-click. "Seven o'clock already?" I just got to bed. I ought to ask if I can stay home. I'd sure like to say something to the crazy people who schedule concerts on school nights."

Situations like this were common this year. The day after a concert one could see students wandering to class with their eyes barely open. One had to beware of conversation with those people because their ears were still ringing, and one had to almost shout to be heard. The concertgoers inadvertently shouted, too. All around were the new fashions of shirts bearing the groups' logos.

There were several very successful concerts in late summer and fall that we enjoyed. Probably the most motivating was the Styx concert. Following it were Rick James and a very entertaining show by Barry Manilow. Other favorites that appeared were Alabama, and Van Halen. Earth, Wind, and Fire and the Beach Boys had almost no fans from Rustburg attend because both concerts were scheduled for Homecoming Friday.

No one said that we had to attend concerts on school nights, but — impulsive youth — we did!

After a hard week of Cheerleading Camp at Randolph Macon in July, Linda Mitchell, Annette Blankinship, Martha Carson, and Kathy Dawson find themselves exhausted and ready to go home.

It's thumbs-up for Thomas Jefferson as he heads home from school on a Friday afternoon, looking forward to the weekend.

Senioritis

Senioritis! As freshmen we swore we'd never catch it, but like every senior class — we did! That feeling of pride and superiority came over us.

Parking on the front row of the student parking lot, leaving for lunch early, and participating in senior skip day only helped to raise our already uplifted egos.

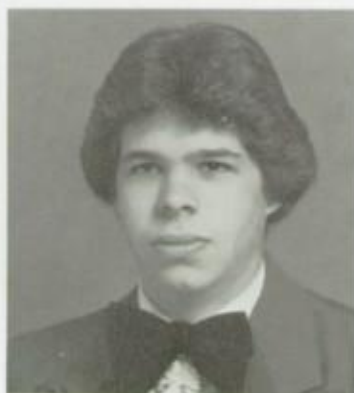

Even though the joy of being seniors surrounded us, in the back of our minds we were thinking, "This is the last time." This is the last Homecoming, the last football season, the last Christmas break, the last basketball season, and the last last day of school — forever.

Although the days were filled with competition during the school year, when that sunny day in June arrived and the seniors had to say good-bye, there wasn't a dry eye in the place.

Conferences over difficult English Assignments are quite frequent, as Tammy Pettigrew and Lorri Farmer illustrate here.

What next?

Being a senior means being asked that inevitable question, "What are you going to do when you finish school?" With the various personalities and life styles at RHS, the question brings an assortment of answers.

Going on to college always ranks high, but thanks to Vocational Technical and the facilities of the shop at the high school, many students have already started working on their trades.

Brick laying, auto mechanics, drafting, printing, and computer programming are only a few of the many trades taught at Vo. Tech. The students receive training from these classes, but they also benefit from the actual experience they get in their particular fields.

RHS gives everyone, either college bound students or job bound students, an opportunity to prepare themselves for the future.

ROBERT BARRY TAYLOR

August 23, 1964

October 23, 1980

After school activities were an important part of Keith Bryant's life. He enjoyed playing tennis and competing in Forensics. His favorite pastime was playing the trumpet and piano, which helped him to be selected for All County Band for four years. He was a member of the National Honor Society. With interest in computer programming, he plans to attend William and Mary and study Math and Applied Science.

With a well rounded year, Lorri Farmer divided her time between Varsity Football Cheerleading, tennis, and the S.C.A. Her interest in society helped her attend Girl's State this past summer. On top of everything else, she was the Co-editor of the Yearbook. She also spent a lot of her time as a teacher's aide. Lorri plans to attend James Madison University to study Mathematics.

Spare time was not what Lisa Hall had a lot of. Year 'round she was active in cheerleading, tennis, and as a majorette. She served as the S.C.A. Secretary, a member of the National Honor Society, and as Head Photographer on the Yearbook. Her hobby was competing in beauty pageants, where she was Miss Va. U.S. Teen in 1980. She plans to enter Va. Tech. this fall and major in Nuclear Science/Engineering.

A very sports oriented young man, Tony Hirtz executed his talents in football, tennis, and as a stuntman. Music was also a key interest at which Tony worked hard to achieve a lot of awards. With a great deal of leadership in sports, music, and journalism behind him, he will be a great asset to the Virginia Military Institute this fall when he enters there to major in Biology/PreMed.

Leadership is one of the many qualities that Linda Mitchell has. She served as the S.C.A. President and has been a cheerleader for the past four years. Participating in band, softball, and the French Club took up most of her spare time. Her personality helped her attend Girl's State and be awarded the Danforth Award. She plans to study Elementary Education at James Madison University.

Ten

Being interested in Politics and Government systems, Dawn Kidd was very involved in the community. She was actively involved in Junior Achievement and was a delegate to NAJAC. She also attended the Presidential Classroom for a week during her senior year. Dawn plans to attend Mary Washington College where she will major in pre-law.

Well known for his wrestling ability, Jack Moorman also enjoyed "pumping iron." He represented Rustburg at the Governor's School for the Gifted this past summer. He participated in Junior Achievement, the Varsity Club, and the National Honor Society. Strenuous farm work during the summer kept him in shape. He will probably attend Lynchburg College and major in Mathematics.

With his past three years devoted to working after school at the Rustburg Mini Mart, Barry Payne worked hard to stay in the top. He has won many honors on the Forensics and Debate team on Local, Regional, and State levels. His spare time was used managing and coaching Dixie Youth and Babe Ruth baseball teams. He plans to enter the University of Virginia and study Engineering.

Outside activities kept Dale Powell busy working at the Village Market, but did not keep him from attending Spanish Club meetings and enjoying the attention that he received by being a stuntman. He liked spending time jogging to relieve the tension of school work. This fall he plans to enter the Virginia Military Institute and study Mathematics or Physics, which seems to be a very resourceful field.

Working at the Allied Community Pharmacy did little to keep Kim Taylor from participating in sports and various school activities, such as the S.C.A. and the Spanish Club. She was also one of the candidates to Girl's State. She loves riding motorcycles on hot summer days and watching Magnum P.I. Kim hopes to get a Master's degree in Business Administration at Lynchburg College.

A dream comes true

Just think. You've picked up your tuxedo tonight and you can't sleep because you're thinking about the big night tomorrow. You'll be nervous and have butterflies in your stomach as you drive over to pick her up before dinner. A dimly-lit table will await you at Steak and Ale, where you will dine and wonder about the evening to come.

After dinner you will come back to Rustburg, not to attend classes, but to attend your most cherished dance yet. You will concede your tickets at the door, and you and your date will walk hand-in-hand into the Commons Area. The music of Bobby Wade will be fast and the multi-colored lights will show off the columns of icicles and other decorations which will convey the theme of the Ring Dance: "Just Once." You will draw your date close as the slow song by Quincy Jones and James Ingram is played.

Then the music will stop, and you will wait to hear your name. You'll step forward and receive your ring, and the rest of this happy night will be spent celebrating and noticing the extra weight on your ring finger.

Juniors finally drifted off to sleep to continue dreaming of the night to come. The evening of November 21, 1981 finally arrived. It was fantastic, and the class of '83 loved it — to many it was just like a dream.

Hard work

I can't believe this. I have an English paper due tomorrow and a History test. How do those teachers manage to schedule everything at once? I still have to read The Grapes of Wrath. What am I going to do? I just don't understand . . .

Sentiments such as these are common among juniors. School is tough on all students, but the 11th grade wins the award for being the hardest of the four years of high school.

When one is a junior, everything comes crashing down at once. Term papers are due merely days before exams, and it seems that 500 page novels are to be read in two days. Teachers seem to schedule everything for Friday, with no consideration for their colleagues' assignments, insisting, "My class is just as important!"

The junior year is a rough one, but the Class of '83 was determined to make it one of their best years ever — and they succeeded!

Class of '83 peps up festivities

Even though Homecoming seemed tailor made for the senior class, the rest of the school enjoyed it, too. There were about twenty-five booths set up in the Commons Area during the carnival, all of which were very successful in raising money. The junior class was no exception to these rules, as they enjoyed Homecoming and made a lot of money at the carnival!

The juniors sponsored a booth with a familiar idea. Mr. Dale White and several juniors made clown faces, which served as targets for a tennis ball toss. Their diligence at the carnival earned them some highly appreciated cash, which helped to pay for the expenses of the Ring Dance.

Juniors became involved not only in the carnival, but in all of Spirit Week. Each day of this special week one could find a junior dressed unusually and colorfully for the day.

The culmination of Spirit Week was Friday night: the Homecoming game. Newspapers picked the Red Devils to lose to Nelson County, but the football team did not agree. Rustburg won 19-0, and several juniors were instrumental in the victory.

During halftime of the game, the Homecoming Court made its appearance. Junior representatives were Loleta Elam, escorted by Eric Scott, and Yvonne Bennett, escorted by Randy St. John. When asked about her being selected, Yvonne commented, "I was very excited about being one of the representatives for the Homecoming Court." Loleta expressed the same excitement, adding, "I've been trying to get on the Homecoming Court ever since eighth grade. This year I finally made it!"

A lot of hard work went into the fun that the juniors had during Homecoming. Along with all the work, they partied just as much as anyone at the dance, where the festivities finally ended. The carnival, the victorious football game, and the dance added up to make one of the best Homecomings ever!

Honored to represent the junior class, Yvonne Bennett is accompanied by Randy St. John.

That's Incredible!

As we grow older, we take on more and more responsibilities. The pressures of school weigh heavily on the shoulders of all students, and juniors are definitely no exception.

Most seniors and graduates will say that their junior year was their hardest. Maybe juniors try to get their grade point averages up by doing well in their studies. Perhaps they buckle down with the books so they can take it easy their senior year. Whatever the cause, though, the junior year is still very difficult — yet some students find time and energy for responsibilities other than school demands.

A large number of juniors hold after-school jobs. These courageous and energetic people often drive directly from school to their places of employment. They put in from two to eight hours and then leave their part-time jobs to return to their more-than-full-time jobs: school work.

There are many avenues of employment open to students, and many juniors intelligently explore them. Grocery stores such as Kings, Kroger, and Moore's Country Store employ some juniors. River Ridge Mall sets the stage for other jobs; T-Shirts Plus, Sears, and Doyle's Florist specifically. Still other juniors stay at school after 2:45 to work in the snack bar in the RHS Commons Area.

There are some distinct advantages to entering the working world early in life. There is the opportunity to meet new people, to make some spending money, and to gain experience. Two juniors gave a few diverse responses when asked about their jobs.

Sherri Falwell works at T-Shirts Plus in River Ridge Mall. She personalizes and sells shirts. Sherri likes her work and the money it yields, even though her job takes up her free time on the weekends. She likes her boss and the chance to meet people that her job gives her. Sherri likes the work now, but doesn't see much chance for it to play a big part in her future.

Stephanie Branham works at Doyle's Florist in the mall. She also enjoys her work. She is thankful for the money she is able to make and the wonderful people she works with. She gets to meet interesting people and she works with beautiful flowers and plants. Stephanie puts in a lot of hours, as she works every day of the week but Sunday and Wednesday. Stephanie feels that she is gaining valuable business experience that may later help her in a career.

It is extremely commendable that those students who work do so. They help to ease their parents' financial burdens, yet they still manage to keep up with their school work. Many even participate in sports and other extracurricular activities. They put in up to twelve hours a day on school related activities, and still hold down jobs — that's incredible!

The turning point

The purpose of high school is to prepare the student for post graduation life. This preparation may take the form of Vocational Technical training, Vocational Agriculture training, or training in industrial arts. Much of the high school educational program prepares the student for college also. By means of taking special classes and tests, students usually begin their planning for college in their junior year.

There are several courses available to juniors which can lead to college credit. The advanced placement program is open in Biology, US History, and English. Students are given the chance to take the A.P. tests on these subjects in the spring. According to their scores, they may be eligible to receive college credit.

Students also begin taking tests for those who are college bound during their junior year. The major examination is the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test and National Merit Scholastic Qualifying Test. This test serves as an "introduction" to the testing system. It also is an opportunity for juniors to become eligible for National Merit Scholarships.

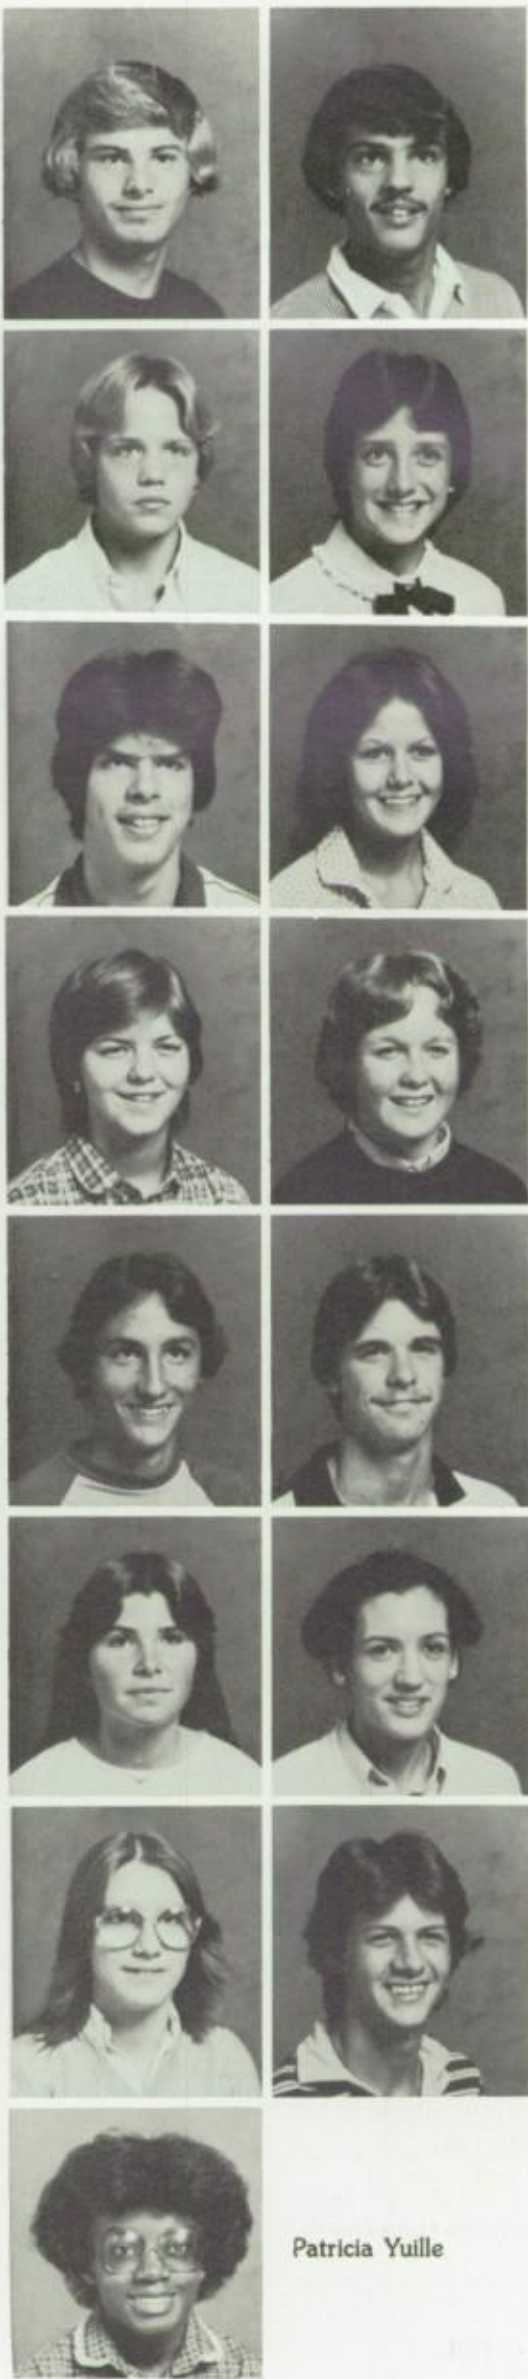

The junior year of high school is definitely a tough one. Juniors must begin to think about their futures and plan for college or jobs. It is a hectic year and very taxing on the student. But as many seniors have said, if someone can get through their junior year, they have it made.

"No!", says Jon Martin as he "learns" a juicy piece of gossip.

Making their mark

Sophomore classes may come and go, but this year's sophomore class has certainly made its mark at RHS.

This class is a good group in most area, but they stand out most in athletics and spirit. They have people who started on the football team which is a rare thing in itself. Many more saw action in games throughout the season as reliable substitutes, which gave the front line of players a chance to take a breather.

Sophomores are the leaders for the JV Basketball team, and this year's group has done an outstanding job. They have conducted themselves in an exemplary manner on the court and off. Sophomores are also a big part of the Girls' Basketball team which went to the State Championship Tournament.

Some sophomores went to Louisiana for the World Series of Pre-Major Dixie Youth baseball. This was the first time such an honor has been bestowed upon a Dixie Youth team from Rustburg.

Sophomores play a large part in shaping the character of RHS. Everywhere one looks one can see a sophomore participating in something; be it football, basketball, track, cheerleading, or spirit competitions at pep rallies. This year's group of sophomores is one of the most outgoing groups ever. If sophomores are eligible for it, you can bet that some of them are out there doing it, whatever the challenge may be.

After that treacherous freshmen year is finally over, sophomores can breathe a sigh of relief. They are so glad that they are no longer the bottom rung on the ladder that spirits erupt to overflowing. Often this energy is spent in hot and heavy spirit contests during pep rallies before basketball and football games. This spirit also spurs many students to finally go out for that sport that they've always wanted to play, but didn't have the confidence to try as freshmen.

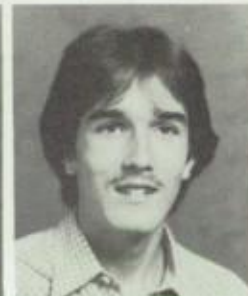

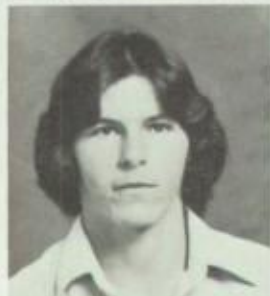

Everyone knows that it's tough to be a rookie, and once sprung from this status and given the title of sophomores, what is to be expected but the jubilant gush of school spirit that seems to happen every year.

The overwhelming spirit that has characterized sophomore classes of the past has certainly been present in the Class of '84. Many times they have rallied to beat the seniors, their principle rivals, in spirit competitions. But, when game time rolls around, the sophomores join with the seniors and the other classes to reveal a spirit togetherness unique to RHS.

We have always been able to count on this high strung group of people to help get things rolling at pep rallies, games, or just any kind of competition or school activity that comes along. Sophomores have played major roles in creating success in the different athletic programs at RHS.

A memorable event

Homecoming '81 was a bit eccentric in comparison with most. It began on the same crazy note as many do, with a carnival after school. This found the sophomores trying to raise some money with a "balloon shaving" booth. This is a contest in which one covers a balloon with shaving cream and attempts to shave it off of the balloon. The proceeds from this successful endeavor went to future class activities.

As fate would have it, the game was rained out, so the sophomores had to gear up to survive a football game and a dance all on a Saturday night. It was an action-packed evening, and they enjoyed every minute of it.

The football game started an hour earlier than usual to allow for both activities. At half time, the class enthusiastically applauded their representatives, Teresa Buchanan, escorted by Mark Rolfes, and Cindy Dodge, escorted by Brian Anderson, as they strolled through a tunnel of flags out onto the field.

After the procession, the sophomores stayed to cheer their team on to victory and then rushed home, changed out of their sweaters and jeans and, dressed to impress, hurried back to RHS to dance the night away. Homecoming '81 was a successful celebration!

Rock Stars

Jeff Brooks, a RHS sophomore, and three other young men from Brookville High have formed their own rock group, "Surge." Jeff plays lead guitar along with Alton Prillaman on bass guitar, Paul Johnson in the key board, and Ed Booth on drums.

The four find time to practice after school and on weekends. When asked if it involved more work than fun, Jeff responded, "It's a little of both. A few years ago I would never have thought that so much work goes into playing music." He said that in order to be a good band, those involved have to be serious about practicing because if a piece isn't "perfect" then it shouldn't be performed. Jeff added, "The thing I enjoy most is seeing someone who is pleased with what they hear."

Surge plays at area schools, and can be hired to play at private parties. Jeff and his band have hopes of "making it big" someday, but for now he says, "We'll just keep playing and see what happens."

Big deals with wheels

The sophomore year is special to students in many ways. It marks their first step upward on the social ladder and academic ladder of high school. They are beginning to feel like young adults, a part of things they have dreamed of since starting school.

Another thing that happens during the sophomore year is students come of age to get that long dreamed of driver's license. They take the driver's education class and go on the driving range to be taught how to handle an automobile in different situations.

Nothing changes a person's social life any more than a driver's license. A new hair-do is great, but if you haven't got the wheels, big deal! A driver's license makes it possible for one to go places without having to ask one's parents for a ride. This changes the familiar question to parents from "Will you take me?" to "Can I borrow the car?"

A driver's license means much more freedom for the sophomores. They can go to more places by themselves, giving them that long-awaited sense of independence.

A driver's license often means no more bus rides to and from school, and it allows students to have part-time jobs, as they can now provide their own means of transportation.

Along with the fun of obtaining a driver's license, there also comes a great deal of responsibility. This highlight of the sophomore year was met with enthusiasm by the Class of '84!

Setting future goals

What is a freshman? The technical definition of a freshman is one who is in the 9th grade or first year of high school. Along with this definition comes many other names: rookies, underdogs, babies, youngsters, and other derogatory terms.

Other students tend to pick on freshmen, but one mustn't forget that everybody has to start somewhere. Everyone who is a sophomore, junior, or senior had to go through that year of feeling inferior to everyone else, and wishing you were a few years older or at least a few inches taller.

Contrary to popular belief, the freshman year is probably the most important year as far as the individual is concerned. This is the pivotal year of a student's high school career. It is the planning period for the classes and activities that students will be involved in as upper classmen.

It's very hard for a student to accomplish anything if he or she doesn't set goals, and the freshman year is the time that is used, more or less, to set goals for the future. It's a time to decide in which direction each student should focus their individual efforts in order to accomplish these goals.

Upper classmen think that they're so great because they're part of the "Varsity Drag", but freshmen are a part of something very special themselves, thinking about and planning for their future.

Moving up

The freshman year is hard in many ways. Not only are the freshmen at the bottom of the heap socially, but they virtually have to get used to a brand new school and environment.

This was not so for the class of '85. They were here last year as eighth graders, so they have been familiarized with the new building and the way things are run.

This is a distinct advantage for the freshmen, but there is also a disadvantage that goes along with it. They were the bottom of the barrel as eighth graders and have still gained no seniority since the new eighth grade class moved back to the Middle School.

Even though they missed out on being top-dogs in the middle school as eighth graders, the class of '85 doesn't let that get them down. They are a dominant part of RHS.

Casually delivering a speech in Mrs. Taylor's English class, Michelle Scott demonstrates her talent.

Their first Homecoming

This year's wild and crazy Homecoming was one that will be remembered for a long time by all, and right in the middle of the activities were those wild and crazy freshmen!

Having been there as eighth graders, they knew how things went around Homecoming and prepared themselves for it. At the carnival on Homecoming Friday, they had a basketball throw, which added to the funds which will definitely be used in the future.

They participated in games and in the carnival more than any other class, so not only did they make money, they also spent it — individually. More of the plastic footballs and mugs went to freshmen than to anyone else.

At the football game on Saturday night, the freshmen helped to cheer their team to victory, and at half time watched as the Homecoming Court promenaded out onto the field.

Some said that they really felt like a part of Homecoming for the first time as they caught glimpses of Bianca Evans, escorted by Adam Coleman, and Pam Smith, escorted by Dennis Peery, representing the Class of '85.

The littlest devils are no slouches when it comes time to get down and party. After the football game they crammed into the RHS Commons Area and helped to make the dance the success it turned out to be.

Some feel that freshmen are a tiny part of life at RHS. Freshmen are treated badly and are just generally made miserable by upper classmen. But how soon the older students forget that they were all small fries once upon a time and how inferior they felt.

Although freshmen sometimes remain unnoticed at other times during the year, they played a big role in making Homecoming '81 happier for everyone at RHS. They contributed an endless amount of effort into making their first Homecoming successful, and these efforts proved to be worthwhile.

Sticking Together

The life of a high school freshman is a difficult one. Being the youngest in the school definitely has its disadvantages. The older kids look down on them, while they are not used to the pressures of high school. Worst of all, freshmen are not yet old enough to drive.

This restriction of age hinders all but those enterprising freshmen. They know that their parents will have to drive them to their destinations. So, with the help of their parents, they carpool. Freshmen are not able to say, "Let's meet at Pizza Hut at 8:00," without making a lot of parents mad. A few volunteer their own parents, and they ride together.

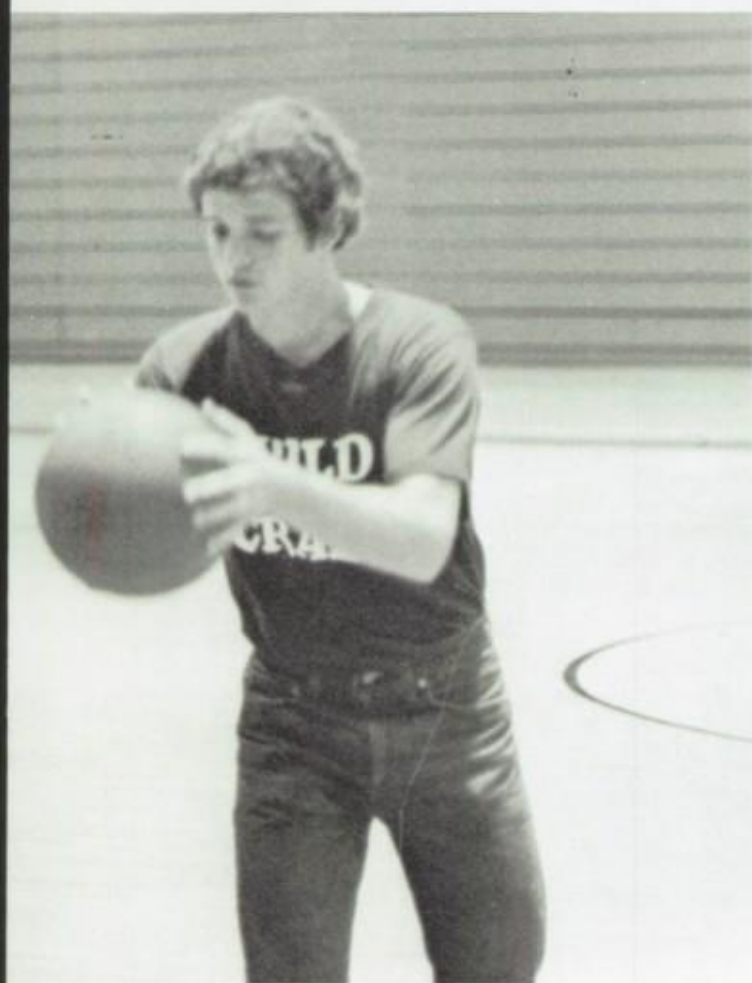

This trick works to accomplish many things. It allows freshmen to maintain close social ties by doing many things together. They unify these ties to form friendships that last throughout their lives. It also develops their ability to improvise.

A lucky few freshmen have good friends who do drive. Nevertheless, freshmen still learn to stick together, a lesson they will use for the rest of their lives.

Growing up

Beginnings. A beginning is the start of something new. It's wondering, thinking, planning, dreaming, and probably one of the most exhilarating feelings in the world, for beginnings are hopes mixed with sweet anticipation.

Freshmen share a rare feeling of hope, anticipation, and accomplishment; hoping to be tops in whatever they choose to do, anticipating the blessings that the future holds, accomplishing that long, dreamed of goal of finally being in high school and feeling all grown up.

Feeling "all grown up" brings on no minor implications, for along with this feeling comes responsibility and at first, this can be a little scary. People stop treating students like children and begin to expect things from them. These expectations create what we call pressure, and the pressure of responsibility is something, which until now, has been a foreign thing.

Beginning to learn how to deal with pressure is shared by freshmen that somehow seems to make them feel more a part of the adult world.

A student coming home with a pile of books grumbling about all of the work that is due the next day rarely fails to call forth that old cliché of parents everywhere, "Looks like our baby's growing up."

Wonders of the world

A school is an essential part of an intelligent society. Young people inherit the knowledge and information accumulated from all time, and are prepared for an active adult life. The main focus is on the student, but recognition is due for those who pass along the wonders of the world. These special few are teachers and faculty.

We begin high school in confusion. We are accustomed to easy work and a relaxed lifestyle. It is a culture shock to a person of fourteen to be constantly pushed to do more work when he is used to a carefree life. Teachers are the cause of the student remorse, but they help the student along and try to ease the worry.

The administration is fundamental in making sure operations run smoothly. Members are often scorned by students, but without their dedication, students would soon realize that without them, the total system would collapse.

There are people who help us plan our education and often our lives. Guidance counselors are intelligent people trained to steer us in the right direction of study. They help us decide on what classes to take and during our junior and senior years they help us to be placed in a college or job. They have a long-standing effect on our lives.

Many go beyond teaching or doing their regular jobs to coach us in sports. These people teach us to build and maintain our body health, to play sports better, and to have humility through competition. The hours these people donate are long, hard, and gratifying.

The faculty is a dedicated and supportive group. They work untiringly to further our knowledge and to make us better people. From the administration to the teachers to those who clean up after we go home, we are grateful to them for their time and effort.

Teachers' pets

Along with the usual connotation of the words "teachers' pets," there is also the literal meaning. Teachers at RHS own a vareity of pets and were quite eager to talk about them. Teachers' pets reflect their personalities, as well as their interests.

Cats were at the top of the list in the teachers' pets survey. Mrs. Kinni, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Catherine Taylor, and Mrs. Rudder keep things simple with one cat each. Miss Wilson has two cats, while Mrs. Reichard prefers three. Mrs. Greene has five cats, while Mrs. Harrup and Mrs. Oliver simply have LOTS of cats!

Man's best friend was pretty popular too. Miss Bell, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Greene, and Mr. Shearer all own dogs. Mr. Conkwright and Mrs. Lowry have labrador retrievers, and Miss Wilson owns a pointer and a poodle.

Some of the teachers show their flair for the unusual through their pets. Some have common pets with weird names. Some have weird pets. Some are even weird themselves.

Mrs. Kinni has a Siamese kitten named Samantha. Hold on — it gets worse. Mrs. Rudder has a cat named Booze and Mr. Shearer a dog named Ma Rainey. Mrs. Greene takes the cake. She has a dog named Barney and her cats' names are Norvell, Abercrombie, Purrolator, Slick and Curly.

Miss Wilson even owns a bird, but she or no one else can hold a candle to Mr. Fleet. Although he doesn't name them funny things, he allows snakes and lizards to crawl around in his house. Mr. Fleet, you are the coup de grace!

Teacher togetherness

One of the things that brings people together and leads to marriage is interests they have in common. Many couples like to play sports together: some jog or play tennis. Others share common hobbies; they do artwork and the like together. Some other couples even hold the same occupations. We have four couples here at RHS who teach together. They are Carey and Gail Lee, Glenn and Linda Reichard, Ray and Judy Wade, and Dale and Mary Ann White.

The reasons for working together are varied, as just about every person answered something different. All eight of the teachers said that they enjoyed working in the same place as their spouse.

Why do they like working together? All of the couples except the Wades ride to and from school together, saving their families' gas money. Mrs. White added, "It's really convenient working the same hours. We get to leave for work and get home at the same time."

There are some other advantages also. Mrs. Wade remarked, "I now get to meet the students that he has always talked about." Mrs. Lee offered, "He can give me money during the day if I need it." Mr. Lee explained that he and his wife work cooperatively. "When I need something from Art, she can make it for me. If she needs something from the shop, I can make it for her."

Is there any conflict with their working together? Mr. Wade replied, "No. We don't teach the same students; if we did and one of us gave a person a hard time, the other wouldn't like it." On the contrary, the Whites enjoy teaching the same students. Finally, Mrs. Reichard and Mrs. Lee explained that they don't even cross paths with their husbands during the day.

Why does Mr. Reichard like teaching together? "If she taught somewhere else, I'd have to follow teams with people I didn't even know. I wouldn't like that." Mrs. Reichard says teaching together gives them something significant in common. How about Mr. Wade? "I like it. I get to keep an eye on her!" Lastly, the Whites definitely appreciate working together. They met here when she was still Miss Smythers!

Everything has to be just right as Mr. Willie Pettus sets up for Physics class.

That special someone

As a student, there is a person in your life whom you sometimes despise. This person is sometimes like the warden of a prison, seeing to it that you faithfully do your time.

Other times this person is almost an equal. The two of you work side by side in an ardent effort to attain a goal. You must stand together if you plan to achieve. The two of you are co-workers — interdependent.

At times this person seems almost supernatural. You are held in awe by his or her sheer knowledge. At these times you take a back seat to his or her intellectual splendor, willingly assimilating all of the ideas and facts that can be thrown at you.

At times this person is special, invaluable. You are so familiar with this person that you seem to know him or her like yourself. You often have the courage to laugh with this person, and sometimes you have the confidence to entrust your secrets to him or her. You have things in common, and you openly and gladly discuss a wide range of topics.

This person is someone who gives to you almost all he has, though you sometimes don't care to recognize the effort. His or her talent and experience are enthusiastically passed on to you, though you sometimes do not reward his sincerity.

This person is intelligent and caring enough to share that intelligence — he or she is your teacher. Your teacher is many things — your antagonist, your protagonist, your colleague, your benefactor . . . your friend.

World Studies is not the world's most loved subject, but Mr. Tom Tweedy seems to have a knack for teaching it.

Giving up her planning period to donate blood during the DECA sponsored bloodmobile, Mrs. Reichard does her part to help others.

The first snow of the year, and Mr. Shearer just can't wait to get out in it.

Sending the money to the bank, Mrs. Dianne Taylor, bookkeeper/secretary, helps keep RHS running smoothly.

Advertisements

Just like most other successful things, a yearbook requires a lot of time, a lot of hard work, and a lot of money! The more advertisements that are sold, the more “extras” (such as color and graphics) can be bought to help make a better annual.

Area businesses were quite generous during the summer of '81 when the 1982 Yearbook Staff first began selling ads, although inflation raged just as strongly as ever before. Prices of the 1982 Owl's ads were not cheap, by any means. Twenty-five dollars bought only $\frac{1}{8}$ of a page, while \$35 covered $\frac{1}{4}$ of a page and \$45 bought $\frac{1}{2}$ of a page. If businessmen really felt generous, they dished out \$60 for a full page ad.

The support of area businesses was indispensable! It was the backbone of our yearbook, as it was the second largest means of funds. The amount of ads sold was very important, in that it had the power to either “make or break” the book.

The confidence of our patrons led them to support us for yet another year, which helped to get the 1982 Owl all together!

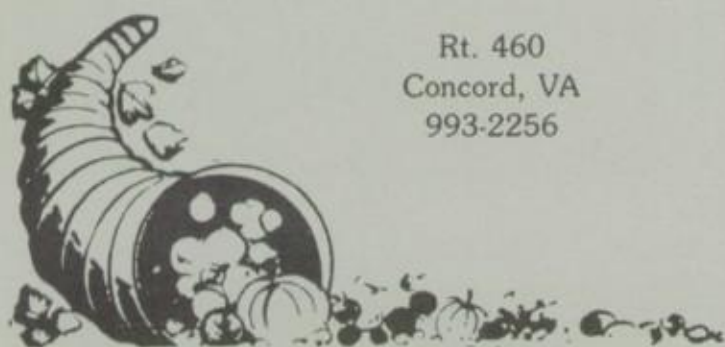

One of the 1982 Owl's patrons, the Rustburg Mini-Mart, serves as the place of employment for senior Barry Payne.

Eating out

Who can beat Mom's homecooking? No one, of course. Sometimes though, students do take the pleasure of eating out.

The occasion directs where to eat. If it is the day of a big football or basketball game, and students are going out for a bite, it's to the usual Pizza Hut, Pizza Inn, Burger King, or their equivalent. On the other hand, if it's the night of the Ring Dance or the Senior Prom, such establishments as Steak and Ale, Crown Sterling, or Charley's lure.

Inspection Time

In owning and operating a car, there are certain things that students learn. They learn to keep brake and signal lights in working condition. They learn to keep their exhaust and brake systems fixed.

They also learn to keep their headlights and horns functioning. The reason? If these things are neglected, the students' cars would not pass inspection. If the car doesn't pass, it's time to either fix it or park it.

Biannual inspection time brings David Moore to Thomas Terrace Exxon and the services of alumnus Brad Taylor.

Part-time jobs

With much of our time being consumed by doing schoolwork and having fun, some of us still find time for even more. We work.

The time ranges and the places that we work vary. Some students, kept busy at school, only find time to work one day on the weekend, amassing from 4 to 10 hours a week. Others sound like workaholics, laboring up to 6 days a week and putting in as much as 35 or 40 hours. Most of the places of employment for students are fast food establishments and grocery stores.

Senior Barry Payne arrives to put in another eight hours at his place of employment — Rustburg Mini-Mart.

New car blues

"Eight thousand dollars for that? It's no bigger than my bathtub."

Words such as these are becoming more common at new-car dealerships. The effect is that of an indirect proportion; as the cars become smaller, the prices rise higher.

Coupled with interest rates in the 15 to 20-percent range, cars are becoming impossible for anyone, much less for students to buy. Unless dear old Dad wants to pay for it, most students have to be content with admiring new cars.

Not having to ride the old bus to school is a real relief for seniors, Sherry Falwell, Telina Hiser, and Susan Shanaberger.

How to shop

A valuable skill that students learn while in high school is how to shop. Many help their parents shop for their families' food, while the vast majority shop for their own clothes and personal items.

Students learn to manage their money through spending. They spend a lot of their funds on music, movies, pizza, parties, and other general forms of fun. A few kids have the chance to help compare and price larger investments, such as cars or homes.

Oh thank heaven! Beth Plaster rejoices as she finds what she's looking for at Fort Avenue 7-Eleven.

Even with the rising gas prices, students still manage to drive to school as proven by Beth Plaster.

Parking is in

Hopefully parents and other adults don't think that high gas prices affect them only. Those students who drive and also work or who are on fixed allowances and have to buy their own gas have felt the pressure to conserve.

A typical Saturday night used to be one of cruising, and consequently wasted gasoline. Parking the car has become more popular as OPEC has raised its prices. Even though gasoline prices are now finally stable, they are still too high for students.

Opening a checking account is not as simple as Lori Davis may have thought it would be.

Money Managing

By the time students leave high school, they have dealt with many aspects of the adult world. One field of experience that students usually become acquainted with is banking. Many students have checking accounts, savings accounts, and are active in savings bonds and clubs. Traditionally RHS students have had to do their banking in Lynchburg or Altavista, but now students can perform transactions in Rustburg.

Together at last

During that first week of school in September, the sunny days of June were unimaginable. Nine months full of classes, sports, and exams had to pass before that long-awaited last day of school arrived. The end seemed to be only a dream. But, like most everything, the school year came to an end and, when the end did arrive, we were shocked and even a little sad by how fast it came upon us.
